London, Paris And Moscow Join Against Rome, Berlin

Proposal Initiated During Coronation

Puts 'Brakes' on Hitler-Mussolini 'Axis;' Will Broaden Pact.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Paris (Wednesday), May 19.—Great Britain, France and Russia today agreed to collaborate closely to maintain the status quo in central Europe. The verbal accord was directed entirely against Germany and Italy.

The policy was decided upon at London coronation conferences between high officials of the three nations and concluded here in political discussions by Russian Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov, French Premier Leon Blum and French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos.

The accord was described as an "antidote" to the Rome-Berlin "axis," by which Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini hoped to extend their influence throughout the Danube Valley.

Back Up Versailles Treaty.

The three nations took the stand that they could not permit geographic, political or moral dismemberment of the present setup in central Europe as created by the Wilsonian doctrine in the Versailles Peace Treaty.

France and Russia agreed that nothing must weaken the Franco-Soviet military alliance. Britain concurred on the point that it would be "dangerous" to allow the Rome-Berlin axis to function "without brakes."

France doggedly opposed creation of a new Locarno Pact which would not conform with the Franco-Soviet alliance or which would not extend to eastern Europe the same guarantees of integrity it would confer on western powers.

The accord was agreed upon at the end of the first day of conversations. They will be followed by talks between Delbos and Austrian Foreign Minister Guido Schmidt, Prince Regent Paul of Jugoslavia and Premier Paul van Zeeland and Foreign Minister Paul Spaak of Belgium.

To Maintain Existing Pacts.

France and Russia specifically agreed to maintain all existing pacts and support to the utmost any effort to improve the economic situation of central Europe. The conferees noted that their attitude conformed with those of Britain, the Vatican and President Roosevelt.

Roosevelt was brought into the issue by a French government spokesman when he explained that France and Britain had agreed on a general plan of extending the favored nations treatment to all central states.

"Britain agreed to that economic discussion because she knows that Mr. Roosevelt favors that policy as likely to produce an improvement in the world political situation, making trade easier especially for those countries which are still hard hit by world conditions," he said.

The new policy is accepted as an answer to Austria's plea that France and England aid her in resisting German encroachment. Rebuffed by Premier Mussolini recently, the Austrians complained that they were "sold" to the Nazis.

Baldwin Doubts League Value.

London, May 18 (AP).—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin in one of his last speeches before he surrenders his office, declared tonight the League of Nations was of "doubtful" value.

Addressing an empire youth rally in the Royal Albert Hall, he said both the League and the Treaty of Versailles "have belied the hopes of mankind and they have given way to disillusion."

He added:

"Today Europe is neither at war nor at peace, but stands at armed attention. For every soldier who died at the front, another is taking his place * * * that in itself is a sufficiently melancholy reply to all the efforts of lovers of peace."

He lauded the empire and democracy and decried the "false god" of war as an ideal for men.

(Jay Allen, leading American authority on Spain, has managed to reach the beleaguered city of Bilbao, where he is the only American special correspondent. The following dispatch was sent via St. Jean de Luz and is thus uncensored.)

Bilbao, Spain, May 17.—In this second port and fourth city of Spain 400,000 people live in anguish under a threat of dreadful death.

And this threat is renewed ceaselessly as the siren whines and overhead pass the Junkers, the Heinkels and the Savoyas of the rebel general who is besieging Bilbao.

They cast shadows, and each is the shadow of Guernica, which had the honor of proving to the world that towns can indeed be annihilated from the air.

They are having a field day, these German and Italian planes. As sportive as porpoises in a squally sea, they leap and dive over the front, over the villages behind the lines—today Munguia and Amorebieta—bombing, machine-gunning, strafing everything that moves. They have nothing to fear. The nearest chasers are at Santander, up the coast. Over the heart of Bilbao they fly to remind the Basques of the famous threat to raze the town and destroy utterly "this pervert people" who dare resist the "new Spain."

They circle lazily just out of reach of the anti-aircraft battery,

Florida Canal Plan Pushed In Committee

Fight to Report Bill Said to Have Tacit Aid of Administration.

House Move to Provide for No Immediate Appropriations.

By Robert C. Albright.

An attempt to report the hotly contested Florida ship canal project, with at least tacit Administration backing, was reported underway yesterday in the House Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The bill will be separated from the omnibus rivers and harbors measure on Friday, and called up later as a separate bill for a showdown committee vote, it was authoritatively learned.

The plan, it was said, is to report the bill without any immediate appropriations, and without any open pressure for its passage by the President.

The colorful but costly "passage" through the Florida peninsula, sought since the day of Phillip II of Spain, has been a center of Congressional controversy ever since the President started construction under a $5,400,000 relief allocation.

G. O. P. Opens Attack.

Last session Congress refused to appropriate additional money, and work was stopped. Florida itself was divided into two rival camps over the canal, and Republicans opened a withering attack on the project they placed on a par with the Passamaquoddy "wave harnessing" venture.

But early this year Maj. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army Engineers, reported the Federal Government would be justified in spending $197,921,000 to complete the work. He recommended a waterway 33 feet deep and 400 feet wide.

Chairman Joseph J. Mansfield, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, declined last night to deny or confirm reports of renewed Administration interest.

But Mansfield admitted an attempt will be made to report the bill as a separate measure, and the question may come up on Friday. If the bill is reported, Mansfield said it probably will call for no expenditures before 1939. The Texan said he considers it a "meritorious project."

Other Bills Up.

The committee on Friday may report the $31,140,000 omnibus rivers and harbors bill, with the ship canal eliminated as one of the pooled projects. Hearings the same day on the Bonneville Dam power sale bill may force over action on the Florida canal until a later session.

There is strong opposition within the committee to a favorable report on the bill, but a canvass of votes yesterday indicated the bill may be permittd to go to the floor, accompanied by a hotly condemnatory minority report

Opponents of the measure insisted it would be little more than a "gesture" even if the bill were reported, and that some of those who would vote to report it would vote against it on the floor.

Floridian Opposes Report.

"I would rather see the bill killed in committee," said Representative J. Hardin Peterson, whose Florida district has been fighting the measure, fearing damage to its water supply. "But at all events, it will be killed in the House"

Peterson said he had known for some time of the plan to report the

Court Plan Believed Doomed By Van Devanter Resignation And Adverse Committee Vote

Foe of New Deal Laws Content to Become Maryland Farmer.

Had Long Wanted To Give Up Bench

Many Years of Service Explains Justice's Need of Rest.

By Sidney Olson.

A 78-year-old gentleman named Willis Van Devanter sat down at a carved mahogany desk in an old-fashioned parlor yesterday at 8:30 in the morning and wrote out a little letter.

The letter, announcing his retirement from his 26 years of service to the Nation as a Justice of the Supreme Court, was a national sensation even before it had arrived at the White House, 1 hour and 15 minutes later.

In simple words the silver-haired jurist laid down his heavy burden and in three short sentences, written immediately in longhand at his desk in the Executive Mansion, President Roosevelt accepted his resignation, as of June 2, adding:

"Before you leave Washington for the summer it would give me great pleasure if you would come in and see me."

Not "Dear Willis."

The President did not address the former justice as "Dear Willis," a distinct departure from his customary informal salutation in most of his resignation-acceptance letters.

Van Devanter, attired casually and comfortably in an old alpaca coat, trousers with well-bagged knees and a purple necktie draped loosely around his soft-collared shirt, wriggled his toes freely in a pair of old shoes as he talked to reporters at home after the resignation.

His demeanor, smiling and kindly and the sparkle in his clear blue eyes seemed to bely his position as a member in good standing of the "Battalion of Death," as New Dealers have named the four justices who have consistently stood against most New Deal measures before the Supreme Court.

The old gentleman from Wyoming, now content to be a farmer in Maryland—he has purchased a 788-acre farm 30 miles from Washington—will continue to serve in the Federal judiciary. He said that he expects to serve at the direction of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes on the circuit bench whenever his services are needed.

His friends said that he had desired to resign for several years, and that the passage by Congress of retirement legislation for the Supreme Court, fixing a $20,000-a-year pension, confirmed his decision.

The justice, who likes to golf, hunt and fish, as well as farm, will spend some time this summer at his farm, hard by Ellicott City, Md., before going to the Seigniory Club in Canada, a favorite spot of sportsmen.

It was during one of his recent duck-hunting trips that Van Devanter broke front pages a few months ago. On the Potomac River, on the Virginia side, a game warden asked

Bill Now 'Corpse,' Sen. Burke Says

By Franklyn Waltman.

Announcement yesterday of retirement on June 2 of Justice Willis Van Devanter from the Supreme Court has greatly weakened support for President Roosevelt's proposed reorganization of that tribunal. The opinion is widespread that only an adverse decision by the court on the Social Security program can now save the President's original program.

Already that program has been stigmatized by an adverse report of the Senate Judiciary Committee, voted 10 to 8, two hours after the veteran jurist's decision to retire became known. This outcome, however, had been forecast for several days and cannot be attributed to the Van Devanter action.

But the decision of the senior member of the Supreme Court to retire, and thus give President Roosevelt an opportunity to name a successor to him, bolstered the determination of the opposition to stop the judiciary reorganization bill at all costs and weakened the loyalty of its supporters by diminishing the force of the argument that such a step was necessary.

Hope Lost, Wheeler Says.

Indicative of the feeling of confidence among leaders of the opposition was a statement last night of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana Democrat, who boldly asserted that the Administration has completely abandoned any hope of passage of the bill in its present form and that "they are now begging for a compromise, but they ought to know it's too late to talk of compromise."

In making that statement Wheeler was fortified by the fact that earlier in the day the bill's opponents on the Judiciary Committee struck down six compromise proposals—all offered by proponents of the bill, including one described as having the approval of the major Administration leaders in the Senate. These leaders were said to be Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson and Senators Pat Harrison and James F. Byrnes.

The latter two consulted with the President during the afternoon, but whether they discussed further compromise plans remained unknown. Mr. Roosevelt said they came to talk about budgetary matters. The view was widespread on Capitol Hill, however, that only by compromising can the President salvage even the principle of his bill.

Sutherland May Retire.

Adding further to the demoralization of the proponents of the President's plan was a report circulated on Capitol Hill late yesterday that one of the opposition leaders had positive assurance that as soon as the reorganization plan is defeated or abandoned Justice George Sutherland also will retire, thus giving Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity to increase further the liberal complexion of the tribunal.

With the retirement of Justice Van Devanter the President has the opportunity to increase the present so-called three liberals on the Supreme Court to four, thus offsetting the three stalwart conservatives remaining. Thus in the future he need obtain for ratification of legislation the vote of only one of the two middle-of-the-road members—Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Justice Owen J. Roberts.

Although it has been known that Justice Van Devanter has been desirous of retiring for the last four years or so, his announcement yesterday caused surprise. President Roosevelt apparently was as surprised as anyone and declined at his press conference later in the day to make any comment regarding the future of his proposal.

The President insisted he had given no consideration to a successor to Justice Van Devanter. This will be the first appointment to the Supreme Court available to Mr. Roosevelt in the four years and two months he has been President. The last appointment was made by former President Hoover February 15, 1932, when Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo was named to succeed the

Woman Hunted As Key Witness In Keene Death

Mysterious 'Mrs. Loper' Had Adjoining Cabin on Norfolk Boat.

Mrs. R. L. Loper, missing key witness in the boat murder of Charles F. Keene, of Washington, was being sought yesterday by Norfolk and Maryland police. She is wanted for questioning.

Two ace Maryland State policemen, Sergt. Marlin Brubaker and Detective J. J. Cassidy, together with Detective Leon Nowitzky, of Norfolk, spent a large part of yesterday attempting to find the woman in Norfolk.

They questioned a man there named Billy Loper, who denied that his wife was aboard the steamer District of Columbia last Thursday night. The officers reported they were unable to find Billy Loper's wife. Detective Nowitzky said he has tried to find her several times, without success.

"We're trying to verify whether any Mrs. Loper at all was actually on the boat," Nowitzky said. "We also checked the night watchman's activities that night. He spent most of the night sitting in a chair near stateroom 75. Keene was in 79. Mrs. Loper was registered in 77."

"The night watchman was in a position where he could have heard any unusual noises in 79. There is an open grillwork above the cabin doors through which he could have heard a scuffle or any other sounds."

Mrs. Loper occupied the stateroom adjoining that of the Washington real estate man last Thursday night, when he was slain, police believe, and thrown overboard, somewhere on the Potomac.

A woman telephoned the offices of the Norfolk and Washington Steamship Co. last Friday morning at Norfolk and said she had "important information" regarding Keene. She gave the name of "Mrs. Loper."

She asked to speak to the general manager, who was out, and refused to speak to anyone else. She has never been heard from since.

Hartman Is Freed In Wife's Shooting

Paul H. Hartman, veterinarian at the Department of Agriculture experimental farm of Beltsville, Md., was released yesterday from the Hyattsville Jail where he had been held for 24 hours during investigation of the gunshot death Sunday of his wife, Mabel.

Mrs. Hartman was found shot through the temple a short distance from the Hartman home, near Lanham, and while authorities withheld issuance of a death certificate, they appeared satisfied that the woman committed suicide.

Edward to Take Bride June 3 Before Friends

By the Associated Press.

Monts, France, May 18.—Edward, Duke of Windsor, and Wallis Warfield will be married at the Chateau de Cande by the mayor of Monts on June 3 with friends "who have been with them" in recent months as guests and without the presence of any member of the British royal family.

Mayor-Doctor Charles Mercier will conduct the civil service, but there still was doubt tonight whether a religious ceremony would be added.

The Church of England supported Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's government in the opposition to Edward, which caused him to abdicate the British throne so that he could marry the twice-divorced American-born woman.

Despite the church's indication of disapproval, Rogers said tonight a

Former AAA Aide Suicide in Manila

Manila, P. I., May 19 (Wednesday) (AP).—The body of Mrs. John Wilson, formerly Beatrice Nelson, of Bangor, Me., was found in her apartment today, a bullet in her heart. She was believed a suicide.

The body was found by her husband, to whom she was married in Washington when they were working for the Agriculture Adjustment Administration. The couple came to Manila in 1934, but for the past several months they had been separated.

Wilson is now secretary to the manager of the Manila Stock Exchange. He said his wife called him to come to the apartment. When he arrived there he received no answer to his call and obtained a key and entered to find the body.

Wilson for a time was connected with the United States Sugar Administration and later with mining companies.

Woman, 35, Found In Coma, Is Dead

Found unconscious Saturday night in the corridor of an apartment house at 3150 Sixteenth street, Miss Katherine O'Donnell, 35, of West Hazelton, Pa., died yesterday at Garfield Hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald began an investigation into the circumstances of her death.

An elevator operator found the woman on the floor and carried her to the apartment of Lieut. Col. Rudolf W. Riefkohl. He called police, who took her to the hospital.

Detective Sergts. Dan Jones and Jeremiah Flaherty said they were told the woman had taken an overdose of sleeping medicine.

U. S. Worker Rule Causing Divorces, Ramspeck Asserts

Representative Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Commission, yesterday declared the marriage clause of the economy act is causing divorces and separations among Government workers as he argued for a special rule on the Celler bill to repeal the clause before the House Rules Committee.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, also appeared before the committee in support of the bill, while Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, author of the "marriage clause," spoke in opposition to it.

Hope of Long Life By Astor Is Cited In Suit for Taxes

New York, May 18 (AP).—Written testimony that Viscount William Waldorf Astor, whose rule for long life was "to kill my doctor," did not expect to die when he established a $46,000,000 trust fund in 1919, was offered today in the hearing of a suit to recover estate taxes collected on the fund.

Lord Astor himself hated taxes more than disease. "When whooping cough is done," he once wrote his 8-year-old grandson, "you are through with it, but the super-tax always turns up again."

Daylight Time Will Be Fought By Housewives

Group Will Appear Before House Subcommittee; Unions Opposed.

The League of Housewives Opposed to Daylight Saving appeared yesterday in the lists of battle over the proposition to move Capital clocks ahead one hour.

Its entry was filed by Leslie B. Wright (Mrs. C. D. Wright), a housewife, after protests at a House District Committee hearing led Congressional proponents of daylight time to decide yesterday to wait at least a week before seeking committee approval. Mrs. Wright wrote a letter to The Post:

"I am forming a League of Housewives Opposed to Daylight Time . . . Any one, either a housewife or a sympathetic bystander, is eligible," she said. Then she recalled:

"At the time of the World War with the attendant number of visionary aids to 'help win the war,' I am sure you remember that this was one of the schemes foisted upon us. I still have horrible memories of bewildered babies, dreadful dinners in the heat of the day, and the long evenings when one had to go to bed before it cooled off so that one might get up earlier."

Mrs. Wright's letter was just the sort of thing Representative Leon Sacks, sponsor of the bill to save time, said he wanted. Every person interested should express his or her views in the form of written statements or petitions for consideration

Male Strip Tease Basis of Divorce For Chicago Wife

Chicago, May 19 (AP).—Testimony that her husband persisted in doing strip-tease acts for guests at their home won a divorce today for Bernice A. Johnson, pretty, 22-year-old brunette.

She testified the strange complex of her husband, Russell, 27, made her life miserable. She related:

"Every time we had guests in the house, he would suddenly disappear and then come out again dancing, removing one of his garments from time to time.

"Finally he would stand there before me and the guests perfectly nude. Oh, it was awful and so embarrassing."

Gov. Nice to Have Right Eye Removed

Annapolis, May 18 (AP).—Gov. Harry W. Nice announced late today, at the completion of three hours' work signing legislative bills, that physicians have ordered him to undergo an operation and take an extended recuperative rest.

Injuries to his right eye, suffered shortly before his election in 1934, have made it necessary to remove the organ, the Governor disclosed.

He said he will wind up pressing duties here about May 28 and expects to enter a New York hospital about June 1.

Dr. Oliver Hart Named Bishop For Tennessee

Nashville, Tenn., May 18 (AP).—Dr. Oliver Hart, of St. John's Parish, Washington, D. C., tonight was elected bishop coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Tennessee.

Dr. Hart will have charge of the churches in east Tennessee.

There has been no bishop coadjutor since Bishop James M. Maxon succeeded the late Bishop Thomas F. Gailor.

Dr. Hart has been the pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church on Lafayette square, the "Church of Presidents," since April, 1934. He had formerly been pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, in Chattanooga, for eight years.

He is one of the leading ministers in the South. He was born and raised in South Carolina.

Dr. Hart is 45 years old and a graduate of Hobart College, N. Y., and the General Theological Seminary and the Union Seminary in New York, later being honored with his doctor's degree at the University of Chattanooga. He is married and has one son.

He was ordained deacon in 1916 and priest a year later. He left the active parochial ministry in the early part of 1918 to join the armed forces of America, and later saw service in France as chaplain of the First Division.

He returned to his native land and State in 1919 and became an assistant minister at St. Michael's Church, Charleston, S. C. Dr. Hart left St. Michael's to become rector of Christ Church, Macon, Ga., and during his administration there he wrote a history of this famous church.

He was chaplain of the American Legion Department of Georgia, in 1924.

'Waiting' for Bilbo, Wife Answers Suit

Poplarville, Miss., May 18 (AP).—United States Senator Theodore G. Bilbo heard his wife testify today that despite his "unfaithfulness" she was still waiting for him to return to her.

"So many times he lived with someone else—for a year—and returned," Mrs. Bilbo testified in her husband's divorce suit, which she is contesting.

She said that since he abandoned her during his second term as Governor from 1928 to 1932 "he hasn't come back."

"The house is there in Jackson, Miss.," she said. "I'm still waiting."

Bilbo's petition for divorce charged "habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment." Mrs. Bilbo, in her answer and cross-bill, denied his allegations. She is seeking temporary alimony, attorneys' fees, a legal separation and at least one-third of his salary.

Blast by Methodist Bishop Lifts Ban on 'Idiot's Delight'

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., May 18.—Alfred Lunt, actor of the New York stage, won from Mayor Dan B. Butler late today permission to present the Pulitzer Prize play, "Idiot's Delight," to an Omaha audience without the expurgations the mayor had demanded previously.

The official decision of which Butler apprised the stage star at an across-the-table conference followed sharp criticism of the mayoral efforts to censor the script by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bishop, in a written statement, suggested the mayor quit politics for a career as a playwright.

In granting permission for the play to be presented intact in Omaha, Butler said he had weighed Lunt's professional reputation and added: "Since a bishop and other public people are backing the show, I think it should go on, with the people to be the judges. Perhaps we can be guided by that in the future."

He said his decision was influenced also by the fact that the passages he objected to were not suitable for newspaper publication and by the criticism directed at him recently because he censored the play "Tobacco Road," and was unable to show the public lines he ordered removed.

Bishop Oxnam, whose 14-year-old daughter, Betty Ruth, expected to take a group of schoolmates to the performance, said in his statement:

"It is a pity that our mayor should make our city ridiculous.

"If the mayor decides to remain in politics, may I suggest a theme song for his coming campaign: 'Every Little Damma Must Be Taken From Our Drama.'"

It was the bulk of the last act, and specifically reference to an illicit tryst in a mythical Omaha hotel, "The Governor Bryan," which aroused the mayor. He asserted the use of that name was a reflection upon the Bryans, the late William Jennings and Charles W., who recently retired as mayor of Lincoln.

C. I. O. Relaxes Steel Demand As Sole Agent

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 18.—The steel workers union relented today from its announced new policy of demanding exclusive labor bargaining contracts and offered to agree to one giving it power to deal for its members only.

Philip Murray, right-hand lieutenant of John L. Lewis, told the Crucible Steel Co., of America, which employs 18,000 men in its plants, he would agree to a contract similar to the one signed last March with subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel Corporation.

The union leaders, still insistent that he will enforce by strikes if necessary, his demands for signing, agreed to wait until Monday for an answer. His associates said this meant a strike would be called in Crucible's plants by Monday night, unless the company signed and that an exclusive contract would be demanded if an employes' election is held.

Meanwhile the Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. answered threats of the union to call strikes at their plants unless they signed contracts by announcing they would shut down their mills in event of picketing. Murray declined to comment on the action of the two companies.

Confers on Election.

These two, Crucible and two other major independents, employing 193,000 men, were named by Murray as the objectives in the immediate steel drive.

Murray conferred tonight with his lieutenants on the Labor Board-supervised election to be held Thursday at the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation plants in Pittsburgh and Aliquippa.

Regional Labor Board Director Ernest C. Dunbar said voting booths would be set up inside the Jones & Laughlin mills, where the company's 27,000 workers will decide whether they want the steel workers' organizing commitee to represent them as the exclusive representative for collective bargaining.

Agreement of the company to the election—largest ever to be held under supervision of the Labor Board—ended the strike at its plants last week.

Victory Predicted.

Steel Labor, official organ of the steel union, committee, quoted Murray in its "election special" edition as saying:

"The result of the election will tell officials of Jones & Laughlin that their workmen want a real union to represent them in collective bargaining * * *.

"It will also show the rest of the steel industry that their workmen also want a real union and a signed contract."

May Shut Down.

Cleveland, May 18 (AP).—The Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. announced today that their plants would "shut down and stay down" if efforts of the steel workers' organizing committee to obtain signed contracts resulted in strikes at the mills."

"As near as we can tell, our men want to work and we want them to work," a statement issued by Republic said. "However, if outsiders blockade the streets so that our men are unable to come to work, we will shut down and stay down until civil authorities clear the streets and make it possible for our men to return peacefully and without intimidation."

Sheet & Tube officials said the same strategy would be followed. Republic has 52,000 employes, Sheet & Tube 26,000.

Ford Drive Sped.

Detroit, May 18 (AP).—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, called upon all local unions of his organization today to join in the campaign to unionize the huge Ford Motor Co. with its 150,000 employes.

Coincidentally, he warned members of all General Motors locals of the U. A. W. A. that the union would not support unauthorized strikes, of which nearly two score have occurred since the agreement that ended the six-week General Motors strike earlier this year.

Asserting that the "very life" of any labor organization depends upon its ability to carry out its pledges, Martin declared that "the international union cannot, nor will not, support any group, department or plant going on an unauthorized strike or stoppage of work."

The 90,000 workers employed in the mammoth Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co. will be the first objective of the union's campaign.

. . . New Faces in Congress. . . .

REPRESENTATIVE LUTHER PATRICK.

Alabama Lawyer, Poet and Radio Commentator Turned His Opponent's Wrath to His Own Advantage; Possesses Quick Wit.

Luther Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, was christened for Congress with a catsup bottle. The bottle, held in the hand of his opponent in the race, bashed in a new straw hat that Patrick was wearing and the catsup ran down his coat collar and up the sleeve of his opponent. But this is getting a little ahead of the interview sequence.

Patrick talks in the slow way of people gathered around a country store. His speech is the drawl that has come from countless thousands of deep South men who are wont, particularly of a cool of the evening, to congregate in country stores. He says "I was born and raised in the country."

The Congressional Directory calls him a "war veteran, teacher, writer, author, lawyer, radio commentator, Mason and Knight of Pythias, member of Lions International Club and the Eagles." Patrick drawls: "That's too much."

He says simply that he's a droll sort of humorist. He used to mix up in politics a lot, back in the time when he was assistant attorney general of Alabama, but he never thought much of running for Congress. But the political destiny is a mysterious star in the deep South. He found himself running for Congress.

Now, Patrick will tell you, he had been known to a lot of people for a long time. For six years he had been on the radio with a program called "Good Mornin' Neighbor." And he had published a book of rustic poetry called "Hope Ye're Livin', an' Doin' Well." One of these poems, "Sleepin' at the Foot of the Bed," was included in a nationally-known anthology, and another, "Old Tom Cat," has proved popular.

"Learn to tell a good yarn, that's the way to illustrate your point," said Patrick yesterday. "I did that on the stump. But don't think I just carried on a lot of foolishness. I had studied economics, made a sort of hobby of it. I talked the issues. And mighty politely, too. I handled my opponent very politely. He was polite to me for a while.

"And then on one occasion he called me a monkey. I ignored that. Later he referred to me as a jackass. Then I thought I would have to answer him. I waited until the end of my speech. Then I spoke of the jackass, of what a patient beast it is—of how the jackass has carried the humblest man on his shoulders; of how the jackass has ground men's corn at the ancient mills, and then I told of how the jackass was the Democratic emblem. I said that anybody who knew very much about a jackass must be behind the the jackass, because that's where the kick is felt.

"The next night I went into a cafe to get a piece of pie and a glass of buttermilk. My opponent was sitting there. I wanted to let him know there weren't any hard feelings going around and I extended my hand. He crowned me over the head with a big catsup bottle. I just bowed politely from the place, pedaled out like Gene Tunney.

Well, the incident got in all the newspapers and the next night I waited until near the end of my speech to comment. Then I told of how all the graceful ocean liners are christened with champagne and of how tug boats sometimes are christened with beer. Now they have christened me with a catsup bottle. I might have slapped him down, I told them, but I'm going to leave that to you, the voters to do." A great howl of acclamation ensued from the assembled Alabamans.

Now, Patrick continued, "I never made any campaign promises and I had no platform. I told them I would follow my own lights and would do the best for them I could. Don't get the impression that I'm always a fun-maker. Not a night goes by but I bury myself in study for at least an hour. I try to study more. I was, of course, formally educated at the University of Alabama and Perdue. I like philosophical things as much as I like my fun.

I like particularly to dash off things like these:

"The ribald cuss, this very day,
"He followed two strange cats away,
"He prowled all night the night before
"A-sniffin 'round from door to door,
"Got in a fight and lost a toe
"'Bout a tabby he didn't know;
"But this occurred in shadows deep—
"He licks hisself an' goes to sleep."

New Deal Finds Several Ways To Limit Prices

Economists Offer Control Agency, Lower Tariffs, Balanced Budget.

By the Associated Press.

Administration economists reported yesterday they have found a half-dozen methods by which the Government could exercise control over prices.

Informal studies of possible controls were begun by several authorities following President Roosevelt's recent statement that prices of some durable goods, particularly steel and copper, were far too high.

They said the President could ask legislation setting up a new price control agency or vesting control powers in the Federal Trade Commission. Some expressed doubt, however, that this would be done.

A broad drive to break up monopolies probably would have a major effect on prices, others declared.

Still another method by which prices might be reduced, officials said, would be to lower tariffs on high-priced goods. A similar result might be achieved by restricting exports of certain goods, it was said.

Mr. Roosevelt already has announced one effort to balance consumer goods and durable goods prices by diverting public works expenditures from large permanent structures, such as steel bridges, to earthen dams, dikes and similar projects on which a large part of the cost goes directly for labor.

Officials said this probably would be more effective as a long-range control than as an immediate price factor, because many heavy projects already were under way when the policy was announced.

For other price controls, it was pointed out, the Government could balance the budget or increase the value of the dollar. There have been no indications either of these steps will be taken in the immediate future, however. Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, has argued for a balanced budget as a barrier against inflation, but President Roosevelt reported recently that latest figures indicated another deficit in the next fiscal year.

5-Ton Pachyderm Falls From Truck, Frolics on Pike

Wilbraham, Mass., May 18 (U.P.).—Molly, a 5-ton chunck of pachydermic pulchritude, had the time of her life today.

It started when she fell from a circus van en route to Worchester over the Springfield turnpike.

Happy in freedom the elephant romped up and down the highway playing tag with motorists who swerved their automobiles all over the road to avoid hitting her.

As horns honked, Molly raised her trunk and made joyous wheezing noises in reply.

Change on Bench Interests Hearing Over Child Labor

By the Associated Press.

A Senate committee, attempting to draft child labor legislation that will be held constittuional, heard with interest yesterday of the forthcoming change in the Supreme Court.

During hearings on several child labor proposals, however, members of the Interstate Commerce Committee remained in sharp disagreement over the type of legislation most likely to win Supreme Court approval.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, conceding that Justice Van Devanter's retirement "might" result in reversal of the majority opinion on the original child labor law, urged the committee not to pin its hopes entirely on such a reversal.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), (Kentucky), contended the committee ought to recommend legislation which witnesses said would provide a new and clear-cut test of the principles outlawed by the court's previous ruling.

Senator Barkley has introduced a measure patterned after the original child labor law, Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Department of Labor Children's Bureau, indorsed the Barkley bill in testimony before the committee yesterday. She expressed the opinion it would be easier to enforce than other types and pointed out that the Labor Department has had experience in administering such a law.

Banker Admits Deal to Acquire Power Firms

Wall Street Fiancier Verifies Nebraska's Plan for State System.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 18. — Guy C. Myers, Wall Street banker, verified the report today that he had been authorized by the State of Nebraska's three public power districts to investigate the possibility of buying privately owned utilities operating in them.

Since each of the public districts is being equipped with a WPA-financed hydroelectric plant, with intersystem hookups, success in the purchase negotiations would afford the first State-owned and Statewide power system in the United States, advices from Nebraska said.

If a fair purchase price cannot be arranged with the private utilities, Myers said, the districts may build virtually duplicating systems. His purpose, he said, was to see if the companies could be acquired at a price cheaper than that of constructing paralleling lines.

Some power plants and main lines, connecting with the WPA-financed projects, already have been constructed, Myers added by way of explanation, but no general distributing lines have been built as yet. Their addition will depend on the purchase negotiations.

To acquire the companies of the private operators, Myers estimated, would require a bond issue of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. Such a commitment would be above $35,000,000 in bonds that the three districts have given the Federal Government for the construction of the hydroelectric plants.

Myers said that before districts could float bonds to purchase the companies, they would have to concede that the companies' present securities are senior or else make satisfactory terms to the purchasers of the new issues which would be sold on the open market.

When the bonds mature and are paid, he said, the power districts would own the proposed systems outright and could possibly resell them to municipalities.

Cotton Converters Seek Federal Rule

By the Associated Press.

W. P. Fickett, president of the Textile Fabrics Association, told a House Labor sub-committee yesterday "a great majority" of the cotton converters in this country favor Federal regulation of the textile industry.

He told the committee, studying the Ellenbogen textile bill, the cotton converters arrange for transformation of cotton textiles, as they come from the looms, into "usable garments and fabrics." Fickett said the converting branch of the industry handles between 50 per cent and 60 per cent of all cotton goods produced with an annual value of about $600,000,000.

Frederick A. Burton, of New York, speaking for the converters' legislative committee, said the group favored the revised wage and hour provisions of the bill calling for a minimum wage of $15 for a 40-hour week.

Gregory Hankin, Washington attorney who redrafted the bill at the direction of Chairman Keller (Democrat), Illinois, announced it had been revised further to give the proposed national textile commission power to increase the minimum wage upon a showing that it is unreasonably low.

Confessions Read At Ax-Slaying Trial

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., May 18.—Statements which a Bayonne detective said blonde Gladys MacKnight, 17, and her former sweetheart, Donald Wightman, 18, made confessing the hatchet slaying of the girl's mother, were admitted today as evidence at the trial.

Both Gladys and Donald were quoted in the statements as saying he held the girl's mother, Mrs. Helen MacKnight, 47, Bayonne club woman, while Gladys hacked her to death with the hatchet, after an argument because the mother "wouldn't hurry dinner" so they could play a game of tennis.

District Commissioners Seek Authorization to Borrow From Federal Treasury

Senate Group Asks Heads for Tax Proposals

D. C. Facing Depression, Thomas Says; Opposes Long-Term Loans.

By James D. Secrest.

Alarmed by the possibility of not having enough funds to meet pay rolls and other administrative expenses during the next fiscal year, the District Commissioners yesterday proposed that they be authorized to borrow Federal funds as needed until the new tax collections enable them to repay the loans.

At the same time, the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations instructed the District heads to submit taxation proposals for consideration as riders to the 1938 District supply bill.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, meanwhile estimated that the District deficit for the next fiscal year will be $7,500,000 if the Senate sub-committee restores cuts in Budget Bureau estimates made by the House, and makes provision for some $350,000 in supplemental and deficiency items.

As son as word reached the Kennedy sub-committee that the Senate sub-committee on appropriations was considering tacking tax riders on the District supply bill, Chairman Kennedy indignantly objected.

"They can't do that," he said.

King Defends House Group.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, came to the defense of ouse District Committee in the possible dispute between the legislative and money committees, and stated he would oppose any move to place the tax proposals on the appropriations measure.

"Let the House District Committee handle the tax bills in an orderly fashion," he said, "and we will take them up afterward."

Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, stated last night he would not object to any District proposal for obtaining advances from the United States Treasury until new tax revenue is collected.

He said he is opposed, however, to having the District borrow money over a period of several years.

"The District is facing a depression of one or two years," he said.

"A lot of these emergency employes will be going home pretty soon, and the District will suffer accordingly."

Cites Jonson Act.

Maj. Donovan told the sub-committee that until 1927 the District government was authorized by law to obtain advances from the Treasury Department, but that the Jonson act of 1922 prohibited this practice after 1927. The same law established the inoperative 60-40 system, under which the Federal Government was to have paid 40 per cent of the District's expenses.

Still undecided as to what sources to tap for additional District revenue, the Kennedy sub-committee met yesterday and discussed in general income, sales and business privilege taxes.

Unable to reach any conclusion, the sub-committee authorized Chairman Kennedy to draw up a program embracing all District tax proposals and to submit it to the committee Tuesday. At that time a decision will be reached as to which taxes to recommend to the full District Committee.

Should the plan of the Senate sub-committee be adopted in the meantime, however, the House District Committee would find itself deprived of the privilege of picking the District's new taxes.

Explains Tax Riders.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee, explained that the Commissioners merely had been instructed to look into the possibility of attaching riders to the District supply bill and had been advised to submit a tax program.

He explained that the Senate could add the tax measures only if it were found that the appropriations bill had revenue provisions in it, because all revenue legislation must originate in the House.

The necessity of the District obtaining loans from the Treasury was seen by Maj. Donovan, who has been ill for several weeks. He pointed out that, even after tax measures are adopted by Congress, there will be a lapse of time while the tax collection machinery is set up.

As a consequence, the District may find itself short of funds either at the beginning or end of the fiscal year. Maj. Donovan pointed out that this practice of advancing Federal funds to the District was generally resorted to before 1927.

From 1902 to 1910, he said, the District borrowed $5,000,000 under this authorization, paying the loan back from 1911 to 1915 with 2 per cent interest.

Deficit Broken Down.

The District also has borrowed money from the Federal Government under the Capper-Cramton park purchase act and the PWA loan.

Maj. Donovan's estimate of the possible District deficit for 1938 is arrived at thus:

The House bill anticipates a deficit of $6,146,000. Should the Senate committee restore Budget Bureau estimates, another $1,000,000 would be added. Supplemental and deficiency items, already submitted by the Budget Bureau, would bring the total to about $7,500,000.

It is understood the District Commissioners are prepared to recommend that the House rider depriving per diem workers of holidays with pay be eliminated. Maj. Donovan stated, however, such en eventuality will not cost the District $1,000,000, as reported, but that the extra cost already has been anticipated in the $6,000,000 deficit.

Former Representative Thomas L. Blanton has been employed by the per diem workers to fight for eradication of the rider placing the District per diem workers on a basis of being paid only for actual work done.

District officials estimate that the ruling of the controller general that per diem workers are entitled to a 40-hour week and the customary leaves is costing the District an extra $1,000,000 a year.

Hell's Kitchen Mother Admits Killing Baby, Absolves Lover

Mrs. Tiernan Confesses She 'Did It All Alone' for Love of Greek Cafe Worker; Pleads to See Son She Slashed at Picnic.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 18.—After a brief attempt to implicate her Greek lover, Mrs. Helen Tierman, blonde young widow from the "Hell's Kitchen" district of Manhattan, tonight assumed full responsibility for the picnic-slaying of her 7-year-old daughter.

"I did it all alone," Prosecutor L. Barron Hill, of Suffolk County, quoted her as saying. "I loved George so much I would do anything for his love."

"George" was George Christodulus, 29, a restaurant steward whom she had accused earlier of instigating a murderous plot against her two children so she would be free to marry.

When she was confronted with her erstwhile suitor on Long Island, near the scene of the crime, she burst into tears.

Apologizes to George.

"Oh, George, I'm sorry I caused you so much trouble," she said.

Christodulus, who had stood on the same platform with her at the line-up and denied her accusations, asked her why she did it, and on receiving no answer, said:

"Why she mixed me up in this I don't know."

In absolving Christodulus, the 25-year-old widow who had been regarded by her West Side tenement neighbors as a model mother, recanted a "confession" made public this morning by Assistant District Attorney Sylvester Consentino, of New York.

In this version she was quoted as saying Christodulus had helped her attack the children in a lonely woods near Brook Haven, Long Island, last Saturday.

The daughter, Helen, was found by strollers the next day while Mrs. Tiernan and Christodulus—so she said—were enjoying themselves at Jones Beach. The girl had been beaten on the head, slashed across the throat, showered with gasoline and burned.

Some distance away searchers found the boy, Jimmie, 4. He also had been beaten and slashed and some of his clothing had been scorched, but he is recovering in a hospital.

Mrs. Tiernan, whose mother spent several years in an insane asylum before she died, met Christodulus in the subway two and a half years ago. Her husband, a railroad flagman, had died a year before.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Donald W. Shore at Patchogue, Mrs. Tiernan insisted on pleading guilty, but was informed that such a plea could not be accepted on a capital charge. Justice Shore entered a negative plea for her despite her objections.

Christodulus was held without bail as a material witness.

In contrast to her previous demeanor, the young woman sobbed convulsively at frequent intervals. She asked to see her son at the hospital "when he's asleep."

'Tour of Crime' Pair en Route For Ark. Trial

Brockelhurst Faces Charge as Killer, Girl as Accessory.

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 18.—A speeding train carried Lester Brockelhurst, 23, and Bernice Felton, 18, tonight toward Arkansas, where they face trial for their lives as a sequel to a so-called "tour of crime."

Shackled together, the young Rockford, Ill., couple boarded the train today for the scheduled 36-hour trip to Lonoke County, whose officials have assured them a speedy trial—Brockelhurst for the murder of Victor Gates, wealthy Little Rock plantation owner; the girl for being an accessory to the crime. Both offenses are punishable by death under Arkansas law.

As the pair left here, their custodian, Deputy Prosecutor Joseph P. Melton, of Lonoke County, said the freckle-faced former Sunday school teacher asked him:

"How long will it be before I get the electric chair?"

Arkansas authorities won custody of the couple by decision of New York's Gov. Herbert H. Lehman at Albany over claims of Illinois and Texas authorities, who also brought warrants charging Brockelhurst with murder.

Authorities in Dutchess County, N. Y., where the pair were picked up last Thursday night, dismissed charges of illegal possession of a gun.

The girl's father, Abraham Felton, who sped here from Rockford in an attempt to aid his daughter, declared she was "through" with Brockelhurst.

He refused to shake hands with the youth, who was paroled to him several years ago after serving a term in Joliet Penitentiary for robbery.

Phone Calls Cited In Wendel Kidnap

Newark, N. J., May 18 (AP).—The Government speeded up its case against Detective Ellis H. Parker and his son in Federal court today, calling 15 telephone operators to testify concerning phone calls between New York and Mount Holly which it alleges were made in connection with the Paul H. Wendell kidnap plot.

Ten collect calls from New York or Brooklyn to Parker's office in Mount Holly were made by a "Mr. Albert" between February 5 and February 24, 1936, the Government brought out.

Wendel, whose "confession" to the Lindbergh baby kidnaping delayed for three days the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, allegedly was picked up February 14, 1936, and imprisoned for ten days in Brooklyn. Several of the New York-to-Mout Holly calls, the operators said, were made from the Sheepshead Bay section of Brooklyn, where Wendel said he was held.

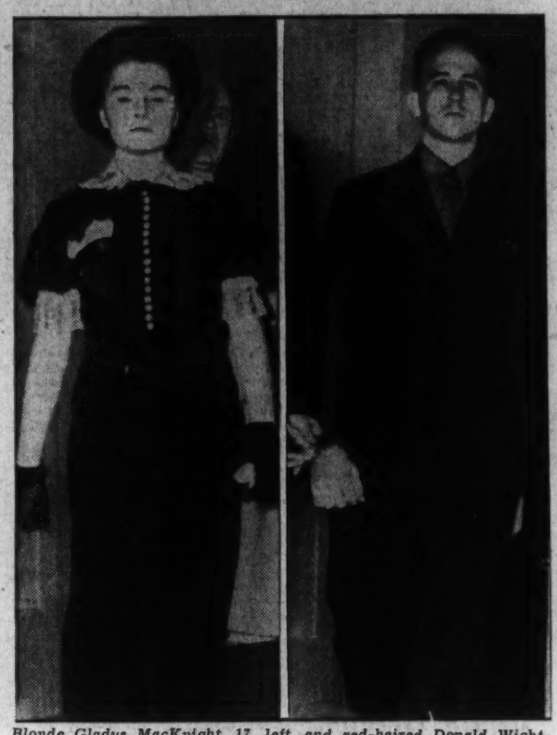
League Announces Revival of Trade

Geneva, May 18 (AP). — A pronounced revival of world trade in which the United States shared during the first three months of 1937 was announced today by the League of Nations.

An official League communique said that the gold value of world trade in the first quarter of 1937 was 18 per cent higher than in the similar period last year.

"Judging from the gold value of imports during the first quarter of 1937 compared with the same quarter in 1936, imports increased most in the United States—by almost 40 per cent," the League communique declared.

Love Flies Out Court Window



Blonde Gladys MacKnight, 17, left, and red-haired Donald Wightman, once her lover, had never a look for each other in court at Jersey City. They are charged with the hatchet slaying of the girl's mother last July, when police contend both attacked the woman who opposed the daughter's plans for a date.

2 in Zep Crew Tell of Seeing Flames Begin in No. Four Cell

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 18.—The fiery destruction of the Hindenburg began in gas cell No. 4, in her tail, the Commerce Department investigating board heard today from two of her crew who stood 20 yards from that hydrogen-inflated bag when the flames burst forth.

"It was right before me at cell No. 4," said Rudolph Sauter, chief engineer of the great dirigible, the loss of which on May 6 cost 36 lives. "The fire came out of the cell—hydrogen fire," he said.

"The first fire I saw was on the front side of cell 4," said Helmut Lau, a helmsman, who described seeing a bright reflection of fire inside the cell before any flames appeared on its surface.

At their landing positions in the lower tail fin of the ship, both men told of proceeding with routine mooring duties until surprised by an explosion which seemed to herald the fire.

After hearing his testimony, one members of the Commerce board indicated he considered it descredited the theory a broken propeller blade could have pierced the hull, punctured a gas cell and started the fire. Lau, he said, thrust this theory into the background along with the possibilities sabotage or motor sparks may have been responsible for the disaster.

The helmsman had cells Nos. 1 to 5 in his line of vision when the end began, he told the board, and he was positive in fixing cell No. 4 as the starting point of the disaster, as he observed it.

First, he related, there was a muffled explosion "like the backfire of a kitchen gas stove.

Wind, Rain and Hail Cause Damage in West

The storm left at least seven persons injured, felled trees, flattened crops, toppled communications and power lines and wrecked farm buildings.

Anti-Freeze Explosion Brings Suit for $20,500

Charging that he was seriously injured when he lighted a match to see how much a gallon of anti-freeze had filled the radiator of his automobile, Edward L. Artes, 325 Ninth street southeast, yesterday sued the Charles Auto Supply Co., Inc., 801 H street northeast, for $20,500.

Through Attorney William Wendell, Artes asserted he bought a gallon of the fluid on November 14, 1934. He claimed he had been told the substance was noninflammable and was safe. He poured in the fluid and then lighted a match to see how much there was in the radiator. As he did so there was an explosion and he was severely burned and permanently injured.

Plane Experts Reveal Secrets In Engineering

3 Recent Developments Discussed in Detail at Langley Field.

By James McConaughy.
A Staff Correspondent.

Langley Field, Va., May 18.—Secret developments in aeronautical engineering closely guarded for the last year, today were revealed to the cream of America's aviation leaders by technicians at the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautic Laboratories here.

Led by Dr. Orville Wright, Grover Loening, I. I. Sikorsky, Eugene Vidal and A. P. Desversky, more than 250 experts inspected the work at the $6,000,000 laboratories, the performance of the largest wind tunnel in the world and technical data on every phase of aviation. Though no startling announcements were made during the day's inspections and lectures, the visitors and N. A. C. A. staff attached particular significance to three recent developments, made public today for the first time.

New Developments.

These were: A new "two control nose slot cowling for radial air-cooled engines," which makes possible engines of up to 6,000 horsepower; technical studies on the efficiency of current wing designs; a "free-flight" wind tunnel, the only one of its kind in which scale models fly by themselves, independent of any supports.

The group of engineers which learned of these and other developments left Washington by steamer yesterday evening, spending the entire day inspecting the multifarious work conducted here. It is the only time during the year that non-Government experts are allowed in the laboratories. Even today, however, each guest was carefully checked, and all photographs rigidly prohibited, for fear of revealing military secrets, still being developed by the N. A. C. A. staff of 400 engineers.

Motor Improvement.

Perfected after more than two years' study, the new type of cowling for air-cooled motors was described as "one of the most important contributions to aviation in recent years," by Dr. G. W. Lewis, research director of the N. A. C. A. in its immediate application, it means satisfactory cooling for motors during take-off and climb, hitherto a serious obstacle in the most powerful planes. It also provides maximum efficiency at cruising speeds, and can be adapted for high altitudes.

In general terms, the cooling device has greater significance. The ability of the cylinder and cylinder head to dissipate heat has been the limiting factor in designing motors of several thousand horsepower. The new cowling solves this problem, making four and five thousand horsepower, air-cooled engines entirely possible. Designing of a new type propeller is the only real obstacle to their immediate use.

Streamlining Advances.

Pointing out that the last few years has seen a great improvement in "cleaning up" the fuselage of the airplane—installing retractable landing gear, getting rid of struts and improving streamlining—spokesmen stated a similar process will shortly mean greatly increased efficiency from improved wing design.

Scientists revealed that even a coat of paint on the wings of an ordinary plane, flying 225 miles an hour, necessitates 91 horsepower more than if the wings are perfectly smooth. Typical wing construction, with rivets and lapped joints, requires 182 horsepower more than do smooth wings.

Tests revealing this data were made in a 500-mile-an-hour wind tunnel, the only one of its kind. According to Dr. Lewis, these tests indicate it may be economical to have ground crews wipe off the dust and dirt on commercial transports at every stop.

New Wind Tunnel.

The "free-flight" wind tunnel is similarly unique, and its construction details are closely guarded. An operator, standing several feet from the tunnel, can operate a small model, making it take off, turn, climb, dip and land by electro-magnets which operate tiny ailerons and rudders. Only a minute electric wire, carrying impulses to the magnets, connects the model with the frame of the tunnel.

Other developments revealed during the day included: Further improvement of the tricycle landing gear, a great stimulus to blind-landing experiments; revelation that planes of the future likely will have their motors completely hidden in the wings, impressively favorable data on Diesel engines; stall-control flaps for wings, already tried out on a Navy plane; discussion of catapult launchings for large airliners and greatly improved take-off technique for giant flying boats.

In discussion sessions, held this afternoon, general decriptions of the "ex-plane of the future" were hazarded by various engineers. From their talks it was evident that tomorrow's plane will be materially larger than today's, it will fly at higher speeds and be safer, will employ increasingly larger engines, and operate more efficiently than any large plane of today.

bill, which he called "unsound economically"

In another quarter it was learned that a member of the committee opposition was approached by a representative of the Administration, who urged him not to vote against the bill in committee.

During hearings on the bill, the committee received favorable testimony from both Army and Navy officials. Secretary of the Navy Swanson stated in a letter that the new route between the Gulf and the Atlantic "would be of value during war to the shipment of necessary material for both military and commercial use."

Any move to revive the project will meet a renewed attack in the Senate from Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who last session led the Senate's most successful fight to sidetrack it.

Africa Expedition Will Be Headed By Mrs. Johnson

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Los Angeles, May 18.—Darryl S. Zanuck, film producer, has announced Osa Johnson, noted explorer, will head an expedition to Africa for location scenes in the picture "Stanley and Livingstone."

The film, Zanuck said, will retrace the trek of Henry M. Stanley, who was sent by James Gordon Bennett to find the British explorer, David Livingstone.

Mrs. Johnson, injured in a plane crash that was fatal to her husband, Martin Johnson, will give two lectures here at Constitution Hall the afternoon and evening of May 28. Illustrated by sound film made during the last expedition of the Johnsons, the lectures will tell the story of their adventures together through the jungle interiors of Borneo.

Proceeds of the two performances will go to the Washington committee of Child Welfare League of America. All seats are reserved, and may be obtained at the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, 910 G street northwest.

Riverbank, Calif., May 18 (AP).—Mrs. A. J. Barnes didn't wait for details when what she thought was one of her husband's neckties wiggled from her hand. She simply grabbed the broom and killed what turned out to be a gopher snake.

Farley Invited To Join G. O. P., But He Refuses

Hamilton 'Still in Fog,' Is Comment of Postal Chief.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has been given an opportunity to become a sustaining member of the Republican Party and to make regular contributions, thus aiding in turning back the present Administration's "attack upon our constitutional government."

Addressing the Democratic chieftain as "Dear Mr. Farley," the letter said "it is now perfectly apparent that the purpose of the present Administration is to basically change our American form of government. * * *

"The Republican Party is the only medium available for organized political opposition. * * *

"During these critical times it is essential that our party organization work should continue to bring about the widest popular understanding of the issues, and such a program requires continuing financial support. We want this to come from a great number of citizens, each giving as generously as his means will permit, and becoming a sustaining member of the party. * * *

"Upon receipt of your pledge and contribution for this year we will send your sustaining member's card—which we consider an emblem of good citizenship. We're trying to make it mean that."

Mr. Farley's comment on the letter, as given by the Democratic National Committee, was:

"Mr. Hamilton is apparently still groping in an effort to find out what it's all about and is evidently still in the fog that enveloped him on election night."

British Empire Will Fight for Pacific Trade

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, May 18.—The Imperial Conference, the British Empire's "Little League of Nations," tonight cleared the way for a $12,500,000 fight against the domination of subsidized American and Japanese shipping lines in the Pacific Ocean.

The empire, it was disclosed, is determined to break the hold of subsidized foreign lines on Pacific trade even though it means a "shipping war" with foreign merchant fleets.

The conference's committee on sea trade, meeting in a two-hour session at the board of trade, announced its discussion of the Pacific situation was "purely personal." It is known, however, that Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand are prepared to grant enough funds to British shipping to put it on an equal footing with subsidized ships.

The conference committee decided to base its action on a December, 1936, report of the imperial shipping committee which recommended that Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand spend $12,500,000 in building two fast modern liners.

Greatest summer show place on earth

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK

Mother Nature puts on an amazing show in Yellowstone. It's a continuous performance, and people from all over the world come to attend . . . and applaud. Included among its attractions are spouting geysers, bubbling "paint pots," mud volcanoes, brilliantly colored pools, a canyon of gorgeous hue, a falls nearly twice the height of Niagara. Here, too, the greatest wild animal sanctuary in America!

A 3½-day Circle Tour of the Park, including meals and lodging, permits you to see every attraction that Yellowstone has to offer—and to see them all comfortably and economically. And North Western-Union Pacific's cool, clean air-conditioned trains take you directly to West Yellowstone, right on the Park boundary.

$46.95 is the round trip fare in Pullmans from Chicago to West Yellowstone (berth extra). 21-day return limit.

AMERICA RECOVERING FROM BAD TASTE OF PROHIBITION DRINKS SHOWN BY STATISTICS

The Martini cocktail and the dry tart wines have replaced the sweet concoctions of the bootleg days. And now, all over the country, people are switching from the sweet-tasting beers to a dry beery beer like Gunther's

The concoctions of prohibition! All kinds of mixtures. Sweetish. Heavy. Even syrup-y wines.

But check up today. The dry Martini leads at the bars. The dry, tart wines are the wines that sell.

Even your sherries sell best when it says "dry" on the labels.

No wonder the dry beery beer is the leading seller! Not just Gunther's here in Maryland and Washington—but in city after city across the Nation, a dry beer, like Gunther's is the overwhelming favorite.

Real beer drinkers must have the dry beery tang, the true beer taste. The sweeter, less-beery beers are just not beer to them!

So ask for Gunther's. Its flavor will grow on you. Drink it for a few days and you'll never be satisfied with any other type of beer.

YOU CAN TELL THE REAL BEER-DRINKERS: They don't just order beer. They order by name. And more of them ask for Gunther's than any other kind.

Jordon Jurors Think Slaying Was Accidental

House Group Told How Death Chair Verdict Was Reached.

What happened in the jury room before 12 men found Thomas Jordon guilty of first degree murder and started him toward the electric chair was described yesterday to a "crime sub-committee" of the House District Committee.

The narrator was Israel T. Good, a printer, who kept the jury out for 24 hours before he agreed to join the other 11 men in a verdict of first degree murder.

He was the first witness called yesterday by Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, of Maryland, chairman of the sub-committee appointed to investigate charges against the United States Attorney's office and the Police Department.

Holzworth Questioned.

John M. Holzworth, erstwhile attorney for Jordon, who made the charges last week, was called after Good. It was all behind closed doors, however, and nothing was made public concerning the testimony. Palmisano said the sub-committee will hear other witnesses beginning at noon today.

Good is convinced the shooting at the Garden T-Shoppe on the night of Good Friday, 1931, which resulted in the death of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, the cashier, was accidental. He says some of the other jurors also believed it accidental.

Misunderstanding.

Good told Justice Letts that the other jurors understood him to say that Jordon was guilty of first-degree murder regardless of how the shot was fired, whether it was accidental or intentional, so long as it was fired during a robbery. He said he tried to get the jury to go back into court for fresh instructions, but was blocked. None of the other jurors appeared before Justice Letts at the time to corroborate Good's story and nothing ever came of it.

Recently, however, another of the jurors, Bradshaw B. Pearson, came forward to back up Good and to say that he would have held out for a second-degree verdict if he had known what he was to learn later.

Pearson said that "practically all the jurors" insisted that, under the judge's charge, Jordon was guilty of first-degree murder because Mrs. Jaynes was shot during a holdup, and that it made no difference whether the gun was discharged accidentally or intentionally.

Another Key Witness.

Pearson gave his statement to Holzworth, who forwarded it to President Roosevelt. He expects to give a copy of it today to the Palmisano committee.

F. A. Schneider, of 1353 Iris street northwest, an eyewitness to the Garden T-Shoppe holdup and shooting, was ready to testify yesterday, but the sub-committee did not get around to him. He is expected to be called today. He was never asked to testify at Jordon's trial, or to identify Jordon, although he had a good look at the two men who perpetrated the crime.

The United States Court of Appeals stated again yesterday that it was "without jurisdiction" to order the District Court to give Jordon a new trial.

Federated Crafts Asks Film Boycott

Hollywood, Calif., May 18 (AP).—Executive committeemen of the striking Federated Motion Picture Crafts formally requested labor unions throughout the Nation today to boycott all films in which five well-known actors appear, and threatened also to extend the strike to independent studios.

The actors are Robert Montgomery, president of the Screen Actors Guild; Franchot Tone, vice president, and Frank Morgan, Humphrey Bogart and Edward Arnold, directors.

Planning Board To Open Study Of Civic Center

Waterfront Beautification on Program for 2-Day Meeting.

Revised architectural plans for the proposed Municipal Center and further studies on the beautification of the water front will be considered by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission at its monthly meeting tomorrow and Friday.

Nathan C. Wyeth, District municipal architect, will submit the Center plans, which will be inspected with particular reference to the site's availability for a civic auditorium along the south portion.

A year and a half ago the commission recommended that the Pennsylvania avenue side of the Municipal Center site be used for an auditorium. The planners will seek to determine whether it would be feasible to locate the two projects on the same downtown site in the light of recent developments.

In the same connection, the commissioners will consider whether it would be necessary to close John Marshall place, which forms the western boundary of the Municipal Center tract.

Also on the planning body's agenda are legislative progress on the King bill to regulate "nuisance industries," proposed changes in zoning regulations and miscellaneous park and recreational problems.

Public's Views Sought.

Where do you think Washington's proposed municipal auditorium should be located?

What type of design do you favor?

To what uses should it be put?

The advisory committee to the Capitol Auditorium Commission yesterday announced that it wishes to learn what the public's answers are to these questions and will be glad to receive letters on the subject. They should be addressed to Chairman C. Marshall Finnan, room 1228, new Interior Building.

Finnan urged that suggestions be forwarded as soon as possible, as the Congressional commission hopes to make its final recommendations to Congress before the present session adjourns.

The advisory committee, which will gather technical data for submission to the commission headed by Secretary Harold L. Ickes of the Interior Department, was organized Monday. It consists of Dr. Charles Moore, representing the Fine Arts Commission; John Nolen, jr., National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Louis A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury; Capt. Hoel S. Bishop, jr., assistant to Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sulton, and Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Prospective sites which have been given preliminary consideration include the Anacostia waterfront at the foot of East Capitol street, the southern portion of the Municipal Center tract at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, the south side of the Mall opposite the Archives Building, and the old reservoir at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest.

Roosevelt to Toss Ball for Congress' Game With Press

An invitation to attend the Anchors Aweigh party of the National Press Club at Quantico, Va., Saturday, and to toss out the first ball in the game between the Press Galleries and Congress, has been accepted by President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt will motor to the Marine base and arrive about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After a brief visit, he will board his yacht, the Potomac, and proceed down the river for a week-end trip.

Until the arrival of the President, Vice President Garner will be the center of attention. There will be a presentation of a sombrero to the Vice President to replace the one lost at a similar affair two year ago.

The honor of reviewing the parade of the Marines also will fall to Garner, as ranking Government official prior to the arrival of the President.

Mount Vernon Saluting Gun Is Back at Site

Martha Washington's Kneehole Dressing Table Also Returned.

The original bronze cannon used by George Washington to salute sailing vessels on the Potomac River as they passed Mount Vernon has been returned and again will occupy its original site near the mansion. The cannon was returned through the efforts of Col. Walter Scott, U. S. A., and formally accepted by the Mount Vernon Ladies Association yesterday. It was ordered placed on the brow of the hill overlooking the landing on the river not far from the tomb.

The association accepted a kneehole dressing table used by Martha Washington. The table and its quaint lacqur mirror were ordered placed in the Gen. Washington room.

Today, Gov. and Mrs. Peery and the Virginia board of visitors will make their annual inspection of the estate. During the afternoon a tea will be given in their honor by members of the ladies association.

The association has placed on sale in the greenhouse seeds and plants from the kitchen garden, which was the outstanding piece of restoration completed by last year's council.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Forming a crowded audience, friends of the Lovette Choral Club enjoyed the annual spring concert of the well-trained organization of women's voices last evening, and testified by the cordiality of their applause to appreciation of the work of the director, Eva Whitford Lovette. A diversified program opened with the "Salutation" of Samuel Richards Gaines, which has become the official greeting of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

This was followed by spirited singing of three folk songs of Sweden, Germany and England in arrangements by Gaines, Aslanov and Manney. The club's most effective work was done in Beethoven's "The Heavens Are Telling" and Chaminade's "Evening Prayer in Brittany," and the part-singing was particularly clear in the first performance of Dorothy Radde Emery's "Winds to the Silent Morn."

Other choral numbers were Robert Franz's "Dedication," Grieg's "Elfin Dance," Campbell-Tipton's "A Spirit-Flower," Kountz's "The Sleigh," Horatio Parker's "The Water Fay," and an arrangement of the Strauss waltz, "Geschichten aus dem Wienerwald."

Carolyn Schulte, the club member chosen as soloist for the evening, offered Monteverde's "Lasciatemi Morire," Panofka's "Tarantella," James Rogers' "The Star," the Strauss waltz, "Fruehlingsstimmen," and "Heart of a Rose" by the late Thomas S. Lovette, in whose memory the organization is named. Her light lyric voice has a pleasing freshness and flexibility in fioriture.

William T. Cameron presented two groups of solos, the first of which contained a "Prayer" by Mrs. Alfred S. Gillett, in company with a chaconne by Durand and a sixteenth century pavanne. In the second group was a melodic "Romance," of his own; Rogers' "Dance of the Gnomes," and two pieces by Carlos Salzedo: "Fracheur" and "La Desirade."

DuPont Admits He Sold 'Short' In Raskob Deal

Motive Was to Bolster Market for Mutual Protection.

New York, May 18 (AP).—Pierre S. duPont declared on the witness stand in his Government income tax suit today that he made a "short" sale of securities to John J. Raskob after the 1929 financial panic in an effort to bolster the market and protect his employes' investments.

The elderly head of the Delaware dynasty of duPonts was on the stand throughout today's sessions, most of the questioning revolving about this "short" sale on January 3, 1930, of 27,000 shares of Warner Brothers stock at 40, which duPont "covered" later in the month at 50.

Rigging Charged.

The Government contends that the "short" sale was a fictitious paper transaction "rigged up" to balance off accounts in its claim of a deficiency tax of $617,316 from duPont and $1,026,340 from Raskob.

Describing how he guaranteed accounts of employes and friends in Wilmington, Del., duPont testified under cross-examination that he had "advised them to buy Warner Brothers stock and I could not let them down."

Case Nears End.

The two old business associates succeeded in having their cases severed and the one against duPont is expected to be completed tomorrow if Raskob is not called to the stand.

DuPont estimated he put up $20,000,000 in an effort to halt the falling stock market of 1929 and that his cash balance at that time was "around $32,000,000." He did not disclose the result but, while off the stand, he told reporters his time was "worth very little now"—he doubted whether it was worth the Government's witness fee of $1.50 a day.

Mgr. Healy, 66, Of Catholic U., Dies at Hospital

Mgr. Patrick J. Healy, S. T. D., 66, professor of church history at Catholic University, died last night at Providence Hospital.

One of America's authorities on theological history, Mgr. Healy had been a member of the faculty at the university since 1905. Recently he had been honored by Pope Pius XI, when he was promoted to the rank of domestic prelate of the papal household. He was the author of several books on religious and social questions.

Born in Waterford, Ireland, Mgr. Healy was educated at Catholic University and was graduated there in 1898 with the degree of bachelor of sacred theology. He was ordained in 1897.

He was advanced in rank from the status of instructor until he became a full professor in 1910. At the time of his death he held the Patrick Quinn professorship of church history.

Mgr. Healy held memberships in historical, political science and other learned societies. His affiliations were: Member of the American Society of Church History, American History Association, American Catholic History Association, American-Irish History Society and American Political Science Association.

Supreme Court Reorganization Seen Doomed

Unfavorable Committee Vote, Van Devanter's Action Cited.

Robinson Discussed.

Efforts were made yesterday to ascertain whether Mr. Roosevelt believed passage by Congress March 1 of the Supreme Court retirement act—under which Justice Van Devanter is stepping down from the bench—acted as a constitutional barrier to his appointment of a member of the Senate to the high tribunal. Mr. Roosevelt replied he had given no thought to that aspect of the situation.

The question was prompted by the frequent mention of the possibility that Senator Robinson or Senator Robert F. Wagner might be named to a vacancy resulting from retirement. Indeed, it long has been common gossip on Capitol Hill that three or four years ago Mr. Roosevelt regarded Senator Robinson as a likely appointee to the court in the event of a vacancy.

Whether the President is still of that mind is not known, especially since Senator Robinson is approaching his sixty-fifth birthday. Added to the liability of his age, there is in the Robinson path to the Supreme Court the question of whether passage of the retirement act does not disqualify him.

See "Emoluments" Boosted.

The Constitution provides that no member of Congress during the time for which he was elected shall be appointed to any Federal civil office "which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time." Some constitutional authorities believe Congress in providing Supreme Court justices may retire on their salaries of $20,000 annually, which cannot be diminished in any way, increased the "emoluments" of that office and therefore place such appointments beyond their reach. This view is disputed in other quarters.

Aside from Senators Robinson and Wagner, Donald Richberg, former NRA administrator; Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, SEC Chairman James M. Landis, Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard law school, and Solicitor General Stanley Reed were mentioned as possible appointees.

The view prevailed in some quarters Mr. Roosevelt may turn his back on all of these possibilities and name to the Van Devanter vacancy a member of the Federal circuit appellate bench, such as Sam G. Bratton, of the Tenth Circuit; Learned Hand, of the Second Circuit, or, possibly, Florence E. Allen, of the Sixth Circuit.

60-Year Rule Cited.

In this connection the President at his press conference made a statement to which some significance was attached. Asked if he still regarded as wise his rule against naming persons over 60 years old to the Federal bench, Mr. Roosevelt said he had not recently thought about that. He was reminded that in January he had sallied the attention of the press to that rule.

Mr. Roosevelt said it should be noted he also had promoted from the Federal district bench to circuit appellate courts judges who had passed the 60-year mark. This reply was interpreted as drawing a distinction between the appointment of men now serving on the Federal bench in some capacity and those outside of the Federal judiciary.

May Delay Nomination.

The President, however, is not expected to nominate a succesor to Justice Van Devanter for several weeks—possibly several months. The day before the Van Devanter retirement becomes effective, the Supreme Court will adjourn until October, and thus there is no need to rush the appointment. It will be necessary, however, for the President to make the appointment before Congress adjourns, unless he is willing to leave the vacancy unfilled until that body returns in January. A recess appointment is not possible because the vacancy will occur while Congress is in session.

Meanwhile, the battle over the President's plan for reorganization of the court will go on, as it did today, with the opposition more determined than ever to defeat the Roosevelt bill which would permit him to name an additional justice to the Supreme Court for each incumbent over 70½ years old who has not retired within 30 days after passage of the measure. Incidentally, in view of the Van Devanter retirement the maximum size of the court, should the legislation be enacted, would be 14 members.

Prepare Adverse Report.

The opposition to the reorganization bill held complete sway over the Senate Judiciary Committee meeting yesterday. Not only did the members of this bloc strike down every compromise offered, but after stamping the bill "unfavorable" they went to work to draft the committee's adverse report. For this work they named a subcommittee of three of their number—Senator William H. King, Pat McCarran and Joseph C. O'Mahoney, all Democrats. McCarran and O'Mahoney were among the more recent converts to the opposition.

This group expects to complete its work by the end of this week or early next week. The bill with the adverse report then will be placed on the Senate calendar to be called up by Senator Robinson or one of his aides when they think the time has arrived for the showdown. Defeat of the measure in the Senate would mean the end of the fight. Amendment of the bill would clear the way for House action and then probably weeks of fighting in conference and on House and Senate floors.

Not content with the work of wrecking which they performed during the day, opponents of the bill continued to defy Presidential wishes. Remarks made privately were reflected in the statement which Senator Wheeler issued last night.

"The Administration has completely abandoned any hope of getting the court bill through Congress in its present form, the Montana Democrat asserted.

"They are now begging for a compromise, but they ought to know it's too late to talk of compromises. Every argument raised by the supporters of the bill has been exploded. The resignation of Justice Van Devanter has eliminated

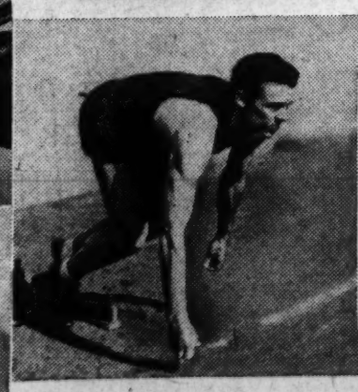
Today the sport of fencing puts much the same value on healthy nerves and unfailing alertness as did the deadly duels of long ago.

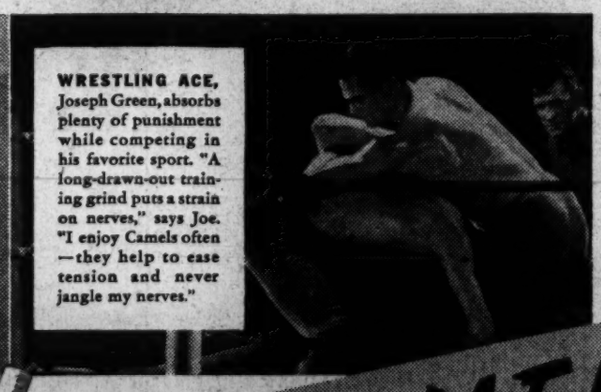
ONLY slow motion movies could show you all the brilliance of Joanna de Tuscan's darting sword play. In Joanna de Tuscan's own words: "A person who didn't have nerve control would never stand out in fencing. My No. 1 reason for smoking Camels is—they never jangle my nerves. Camel is the cigarette that I find permits me to smoke as often as I please. It's Camels for me 'for digestion's sake' too. They're so mild they never make my throat harsh or rough."

DOROTHY KILGALLEN, girl reporter, was assigned to break the women's globe-circling record. She did—made the trip in 24½ days! And Camels were with her every step of the way. "It was a breathless dash," she says. "I was glad to have Camels with me. I know they don't frazzle the nerves."

40 YEARS A RAILROAD MAN—15 years a Camel smoker. "I'm proud to be a throttle man of the 20th Century Limited," says Chas. J. Chase. "I don't take chances with my nerves. I smoke Camels—smoke 'em all I have a mind to. Camels don't get on my nerves. I appreciate how mild Camels are."



HE BROKE the world's indoor record in 440-yd. dash twice in one day. Ray Ellinwood says: "Jittery nerves are a big bugaboo to a track man. I've had healthy nerves right through my track career. I find that smoking Camels never jangles my nerves."



WRESTLING ACE, Joseph Green, absorbs plenty of punishment while competing in his favorite sport. "A long-drawn-out training grind puts a strain on nerves," says Joe. "I enjoy Camels often—they help to ease tension and never jangle my nerves."

the last flimsy excuse for a change.

"The Administration leaders' only purpose in continuing their efforts to obtain a larger court is to save their faces. They now would be content with a lot less than six justices, and they'll never get any."

Similar in spirit was the reply of Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, another leader of the opposition, to whether he believed the Van Devanter retirement would affect the prospects of the court bill.

"You cannot kill a corpse," he asserted.

On the other hand, a number of proponents of the court bill insisted the Van Devanter announcement would have no effect on the fight and several privately pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt, bit by bit, was achieving the objectives he sought, even though the course of his bill has run into legislative rocks and shoals.

Desire to Compromise.

The Logan amendment would authorize the President to name to the Supreme Court one additional justice for each incumbent over 75 years of age, but with not more than one to be added in any calendar year. Not counting Justice Van Devanter, there are four members of the Supreme Court more than 75 years old.

Thus the vote on this amendment, which Senator Logan proposes to offer again on the Senate floor in hope of saving the bill, was as follows:

Against the amendment — King, McCarran, Van Nuys, Burke, Pittman, Connally, O'Mahoney, Borah, Austin and Steiwer.

Senator McCarran withdrew his proposed compromises and the opponents held their ranks against any compromise, except for Senator Hatch. Senator Norris moved that the bill be reported favorably to the Senate, and this was defeated, 10 to 8. Senator Dieterich moved a report without recommendation. Senator McCarran proposed an amendment providing an adverse report with a recommendation that the bill not be passed. The McCarran amendment was adopted, 10 to 8.

The vote for the adverse report was as follows:

him, as a matter of course, to show his $1 hunting license stamp.

He didn't have one and was forced to plead ignorance of the law. After he had promised to obtain one immediately—which he did—the matter was closed.

Receives Tributes.

All members of the Supreme Court except Justices Brandeis, Roberts and Cardozo issued tributes to Van Devanter. Roberts was away from Washington.

While the newsmen found that the tall, spare-framed jurist was amiable and friendly, and while cameramen flared their flash-bulbs freely in his face yesterday, his retirement from the bench brought surprised gasps and then relieved sighs from many New Deal leaders.

In a Senate corridor, Senator Key Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, when told of the news, summed up other off-the-records reaction in Congress as he said:

"I am glad to hear it. I think he needs a rest."

"Great Assenter."

Justice Van Devanter might have been called "The Great Assenter," in contradistinction to the term, "The Great Dissenter," often applied to the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. His record up until the last or present term of the court shows that of 41 cases in which acts of Congress were held unconstitutional, Van Devanter assented 41 times and dissented none. In but three of these did he write the opinion, but the figure means that he was on the prevailing side of the court in declaring an act of Congress unconstitutional 41 times.

The wide spread of this record of declaring Congressional acts unconstitutional is revealed by the fact that in the court's entire history only 76 such acts have been invalidated, and Van Devanter assisted in that invalidation 41 times.

Until the beginning of the present term he had voted against New Deal legislation 12 times. He had voted for it once, in the Tennessee Valley Authority decision, where constitutionality was not determined.

This term he voted, however, with the Administration nine times and against it but thrice. He voted against applying the Wagner labor relations act to the Associated Press and to manufacturing companies in two votes and against the Administration when it contended the Congressional resolution, cutting off payment of obligations in gold, applied to bullion as well as coin.

Called "Reactionary."

Liberals long have called him among the most "reactionary" justices of the court. In 1910 William Jennings Bryan said Van Devanter was "the man who gave a decision giving to the Union Pacific land along its right of way amounting in value to millions of dollars; he is the judge who held that two railroads running parallel to each other for 2,000 miles are not competing lines, one of these roads being the Union Pacific."

Set Aside Rail Tax.

These decisions, however, were made by the justice when he was a member of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals. He joined in setting aside the North Dakota State tax on the Great Northern Railroad in 1936; ruled that a return on investment of 6.26 per cent in the Baltimore & Ohio case was confiscatory, and wrote opinions—he has written far fewer opinions than any other justice now on the Supreme bench—holding that a State has no power to fix the weight of bread; an opinion invalidating the Federal gift tax, and an opinion that a West Virginia law giving the people of the State priority rights in regard to their own natural-gas resources before export to other States actually interfered with interstate commerce.

His history is romantic. Born in Marion, Ind., he sought his fortune in the West at the age of 23, and found it as a horseback circuit lawyer trying murder and cattle-rustling cases in Wyoming.

Got Acquittals.

One of the most famous cases came when a notorious bad man, Tim Horn, hired by some cattlemen to guard herds, shot a rustler named Willie Nickell. Van Devanter obtained his acquittal. Later Horn was hanged for another murder. On another occasion Van Devanter defended a gang of Texas gunmen, hired as cattle-herd guards, who shot two rustlers. Federal troops were required to round up and arrest the Texans, but Van Devanter obtained their acquittal with ease.

His childhood sweetheart, Dollie Burhans, whom he married in Indiana in 1883, was so inextricably a part of his life that news of her sudden death in the Black Forest in Germany in 1934 caused him to faint. He has been in ill health often since.

He often has been criticized for the few opinions he actually writes, but intimates of Supreme Court members say his counsel, given in the regular court conferences, is pointed and decisive. He was compared adversely by many progressives to the late Justice Holmes, as far back as 1932, when after Holmes' resignation in January, it was noted that Holmes had delivered 22 decisions, while Van Devanter had written but one. Van Devanter has written but three opinions in the last two terms of court.

Resignation Made Difficult.

The President's plan for packing the Supreme Court has created a most embarrassing situation for justices who would like to take advantage of the retirement act recently passed by Congress. Whatever they may decide to do their actions will be subject to misinterpretation. They cannot avoid being somewhat influenced by speculation as to the effect of their decisions, whether to remain or to withdraw, upon the outcome of the struggle over the court proposal.

Justice Van Devanter has extricated himself from this difficult position by a dignified announcement of his desire to retire from regular active service. Having held a commission as associate justice of the court for 26 years, and having reached the advanced age of 78, he simply signifies his intention to take advantage of the recently passed retirement act. In his case, there is no reason to look for ulterior motives, as his contemplation of resignation was reported long before the court crisis developed. It may well be that he has postponed this action until defeat of the President's proposal seems assured, from a very human dislike of seeming to leave office while under fire.

Not all the justices, however, are in a position to exercise the freedom of choice which would normally be theirs, to retire without feeling that they are abandoning their colleagues in the struggle to preserve the independence of the court against political pressure. Even the otherwise highly desirable retirement law must seem to some of them a trap to lure them from their defensive positions.

If President Roosevelt had not resolved to force the issue, he might before this have had a reconstituted court as a result of voluntary withdrawals of some of the older members.

The Shake-up In Valencia.

The cabinet crisis in Valencia, which has now come to an end with the elevation of Dr. Juan Negrin to the premiership and of Indalecio Prieto to the newly created post of defense minister is important on several counts.

In the first place, it has resulted in a drastic reduction in the size of the cabinet. Henceforth that body will consist of only 9 instead of 16 ministers. The cabinet is now small enough to constitute itself a supreme war council well able to supervise the conduct of the war as a whole and make possible that unity of command which has been badly needed. In that connection the concentration in the hands of Indalecio Prieto, right-wing Socialist, of the former ministries of war, navy, air and munitions is extremely significant. No factor has handicapped the government more than that of divided authority with governmental and extra-governmental bodies acting independently of each other and not infrequently at cross purposes.

The shake-up in Valencia is also important because it marks the elimination from the government of the representatives of the great Socialist and Anarcho-Syndicalist labor organizations. This development may be temporary, since it was not originally contemplated by Valencia leaders. Yet the fact remains that their omission from the cabinet does mark a further stage in the Spanish government's evolution since those early days of the civil war when the government was nothing and the labor organizations and their armed members everything.

This situation has not wholly been reversed. The labor organizations, Socialist and Anarcho-Syndicalist alike, still command very considerable power, whether directly represented in the regime or not. Yet the trend is now in the direction of their subordination to the constituted authorities. This may make for trouble, as the Catalan uprising of Anarcho-Syndicalist, Trotzkyist and other extremist elements has revealed. But, on the other hand, it is equally possible that it may lead to greater efficiency in the conduct of the war.

This leads to a third conclusion. The factional struggle at Valencia has revealed the existence of cracks within the Popular Front which may, sooner or later, lead to dangerous fissures. It is to no small extent the threat from the rebels that keeps the moderates and the extremists in the same harness. Should that threat be removed the centrifugal tendencies within the Popular Front may be enormously and dangerously increased.

The President's Choice.

The resignation of Justice Van Devanter, coupled with the Senate Judiciary Committee's adverse report on the proposal to pack the Supreme Court, provides a critical test of the quality of President Roosevelt's leadership. He now has what may well prove to be his last opportunity to withdraw gracefully from an untenable position. By acceptance or refusal of this opportunity his motives in the issue will inevitably be judged by the American people as a whole.

Already Mr. Roosevelt has driven a wedge deep into the heart of his party. In the solid group of Democratic Senators who have pledged unrelenting opposition to his attack on the judiciary lies the nucleus of a new political alignment. Ill-judged threats by Mr. Farley have greatly helped to stiffen and consolidate a group which has in effect been told that if its members do not hang together they will hang separately. A few more blows on the wedge and the huge, inchoate, unsolidified Roosevelt following may be split from top to bottom.

To justify the risk of such an outcome the President must be able to demonstrate some overwhelming necessity for driving his court plan through. But it is now utterly impossible to argue that such a necessity exists. Even before the resignation of Justice Van Devanter a whole series of Supreme Court decisions had upheld fundamental points in the Administration program as so far revealed. Now it will soon be the President's prerogative to appoint to the court another justice who will make the so-called liberal majority secure.

Under such conditions there can be only one possible interpretation for further efforts to legalize the wholesale court-packing scheme. This is that the President's real objective is to undermine the independence of the judiciary and establish a subservient tribunal which will signify approval in advance for any legislative decree Mr. Roosevelt may in future wish to drive through. Against such an outcome every Democrat worthy of the name may be expected to revolt. And that revolt will be stimulated because, at the stage now reached, underlying motives can no longer be plausibly concealed by sugary assurances of benevolent purpose.

There is no reason whatsoever to suppose that Mr. Van Devanter is resigning either to embarrass the President, or to facilitate the latter's withdrawal from the tangle he is in. Resignation of this elderly justice has been periodically rumored for a couple of years and is amply explained by his letter to the White House. Its effect can not be embarrassing to Mr. Roosevelt unless he himself decides to make it so. On the contrary a face-saving solution of his problem is now for the first time possible.

Even though the vote was only 10 to 8 the definitely adverse report of the Senate Judiciary Committee is highly significant. It is a symptom of growing resentment against executive dictation, a resentment which can only be intensified by an insulting cracking of the patronage whip. At the very best, Mr. Roosevelt can now hope only for the barest possible margin of victory and that after a grueling, vindictive fight. Such a victory might well be celebrated on the ruins of the Democratic Party.

Therefore, the President now faces the most exacting test of his qualities of leadership which has yet arisen. If real wisdom is to be counted among those qualities he will let it be known that his interest lies in the substance, now gained, rather than in the shadow of his historic proposal. But if his predisposition, as his enemies claim, is to substitute personal dictatorship for the traditional American system, obviously he will press onward to destroy the court, and perhaps himself in the ruins.

It is a momentous decision which Mr. Roosevelt must make, both for the final judgment which history will pass upon his character and for the Nation of whose fate he has the honor to be the temporary trustee.

The Cycle Complete.

The long arm of Stanley Baldwin is still reaching out to tie the affairs of the Duke of Windsor into a knot.

Last December the British prime minister was instrumental in forcing the then Edward VIII off the throne because, against the wishes of the government, the monarch insisted on the personal prerogative of marrying the woman of his choice. Now, no doubt through the intervention of the same individual, Windsor is to be deprived of the presence at his marriage of any member of the British royal family.

One or more of them, no doubt, would like to be present at the ceremony. Blood, after all, is thicker than water. But such sentimental considerations the government has swept aside. Hence the nuptials of the duke and his fiancee will be celebrated with only those in attendance who have been with the principals in the past months.

At first glance this seems like an unnecessary bit of vindictiveness on the part of Baldwin and his colleagues. Some will say: "Why not let the poor chap alone? Why not let him enjoy the moment of happiness for which he sacrificed a throne?" But to take this position is to ignore those reasons of high politics which are ever uppermost in the minds of British statesmen.

They are under no illusions regarding the stability of the British throne. They know that it suffered a serious blow by the abdication of Edward VIII and that by no means all the ground lost was regained by the very ornate coronation. They have no desire to see established in France, or anywhere the Duke of Windsor and his bride may settle down, a sentimental alternative to Buckingham Palace. Hence their determination to prevent any royal luster from being shed on the wedding at Monts.

It is now clear that the British government has succeeded in blocking the desire or intention of any of Windsor's family to attend the wedding. In doing so they have made it clearer than ever that the royal household can have no private life that in any degree conflicts with public policy. Henceforth, more than ever, British royalty is to be the pampered prisoner of the state.

The old cry used to be "The King can do no wrong." This must now be read, "The King is not permitted to do wrong."

The cycle is complete.

A Blow To Chain Stores.

In upholding the constitutionality of the Louisiana chain store tax, the Supreme Court majority opinion has relied upon arguments of somewhat doubtful economic validity.

The law in question provides for a tax upon each store belonging to the chains operating in the State. The levy per store is graded in accordance with the number of units controlled by the chain, wherever located. As a result the A. & P., with over 15,000 stores throughout the country, was assessed $550 for each of the 106 stores within Louisiana while a local chain with 92 units doing substantially the same kind of business paid only $30 per store.

In answer to the charge that this method of taxation constitutes an arbitrary discrimination in favor of local as against national chains, and places a burden upon interstate commerce, the court held that the levy is an occupation or license tax justified as a proper exercise of the State's police power. "Whatever a State may forbid or regulate it may permit," it said, "upon condition that a fee be paid in return for the privilege, and such a fee may be exacted to discourage the prosecution of a business or to adjust competitive or economic inequalities."

Politically, of course, this is incontestable. Yet the minority dissented strongly, holding that the tax is "a penalty imposed upon an operator of a business wholly beyond the reach of the law of that State." It found no valid reason for imposing an enormously increased tax upon the A. & P. On the contrary the minority decision held that the exaction is based upon fallacious reasoning. An attempt to fix the extent of the competitive advantage which will inure in favor of a business with stores outside the State of Louisiana, was said to be an "utterly futile undertaking."

From the economic viewpoint the minority opinion seems to be based upon a much more realistic perception of the true character of the Louisiana chain-store tax. Its discriminatory character is best realized by considering the effect of a multiplication of State laws patterned after the Louisiana model. The result would be to pile up penalty taxes against the large chains, doing a nation-wide business, until they might be forced to dissolve. The minority opinion clearly envisages that possibility as well as the danger that the same kind of discriminatory graduation of rates might be extended to other types of taxation.

It is particularly disturbing to have the police powers of the State invoked as an excuse for legislation aimed at the large chains on the disputable assumption that they enjoy advantages denied to their competitors in the form of secret rebates, allowances and brokerage fees. Smaller chains enjoy similar advantages. In any case, competitive equality will scarcely be brought about by haphazard graded levies imposed in accordance with the number of stores controlled by a chain.

The Robinson-Patman act, moreover, aims at the suppression of unreasonable quantity discounts, rebates, etc. As a Federal law it is much better adapted to control the unfair competitive practices of the national chains than is local legislation. And the Federal Trade Commission has already charged the A. & P. with alleged violation of the Robinson-Patman act.

Thus the company finds itself subject to extra heavy taxes in Louisiana on the ground that it profits by practices which have been declared illegal under a Federal law. Some day our business concerns will have to be rescued from the morass of conflicting regulatory legislation, and legalistic interpretations of regulatory laws, in which they are now floundering.

The U. S. Housing Program.

Albert Mayer in The Nation.

The contention that housing activity should be wholly decentralized and made the subject of State and local rather than national action is fallacious or insincere. We must have national legislation. In the first place, exclusively State or local action means delay, because State or local mechanisms are not ready to function on the required scale without Federal assistance. Even in New York State, which is farthest advanced in this respect, the bill providing for a $100,000,000 bond issue to be voted on next November would mean at least a year's delay. In the second place, most localities are not yet in a position to raise the necessary funds. Finally, for the present at least, local funds come largely from real estate taxes, which are in reality sales taxes. In other words, locally raised subsidies are paid for by the consumers themselves. Federal subsidies can tap the graduated income taxes. Of course, we must insist on local participation in planning, construction and operation. Where housing authorities do not exist, they must be created. And we must see to it that their members are not just real estate men, but persons who will push for housing. Labor should be represented.

The Jordon Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me congratulate The Post for publishing Folliard's unbiased and informative article, May 16, on the Jordon case.

This case coming on the heels of a year-long investigation by an unbiased citizens' group, the Washington Criminal Justice Association, showing apparent irregularities in bonding practices, men held in jail supposedly without knowing what they were in for, and worst of all having, in many cases incompetent defense attorneys assigned to them, makes a Congressional investigation imperative. I say frankly, I do not know whether all these things are true or not, but certainly the public would feel more confidence in its justice machinery and those concerned would feel better to have a full and free investigation. Let all the records from beginning to end be made public in the Jordon case.

What we need in Washington is a Public Defender with a staff to investigate and defend those without means to hire a competent lawyer. Many cities such as Denver, Los Angeles and Indianapolis provide competent Public Defenders for poor persons accused of crime. Some States, I believe, provide for Public Defenders to various cities. Just because a person is poor is no reason for sending him to the electric chair. Let us have "Equal Justice Under Law." ARISTOTLE.

Lonely Girls' Club.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 15 appeared an account of the worthy suggestion made by Dr. Albert G. de Quevedo, psychologist and lecturer, for the establishment of a "lonely girls" club in the Capital.

Since this is a matter which so vitally affects the happiness and welfare of a great number of our young people in Washington, the consummation of this idea should be given deep consideration by some organization or club interested enough and in a position to do so. However, the young people should realize that nothing will be done till they themselves, girls and boys, make the requisite demand and effort. OLD-TIMER

Civil Service Reform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is saddening news to learn that 350 persons are to lose their jobs and incomes in the General Accounting Office while spinsters, bachelors and childless married couples will retain their jobs with incomes far in excess of their economic needs or as compensation for the services they may render.

As a matter of morality, economy and democracy it is imperative that the civil service be reclassified on a scientific basis and a complete revision of the pay schedule effected. Were this done and excessive salaries cut to a reasonable rate of pay the civil service personnel could be increased without increasing the cost for social services until there is reasonable assurance that any person may find employment in commercial organizations. The Government should not deprive needy persons of income. To do so is to increase the need for relief, destroy morale and faith in democratic government. EDWIN EVANS.

England's Consistency.

Can it be possible that dear old England has lost one of her outstanding characteristics? Today a student of history stands aghast at the stand, or shall I say struggle, the royal family of England made to throw aside morality, dignity and Christianity, in accepting as one of its own, such a person as the future Duchess of Windsor?

To a Christian who believes that only the "pure in heart shall see God," and who has always felt that the royal family of England were Christians in every sense of the word, the acceptance of Mrs. Wallis Warfield even after her forthcoming marriage to the Duke of Windsor indicates a loss of consistency that the whole world deplores.

WPA Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "WPA's Educational Projects" in The Post of May 17 is beyond my comprehension. After revealing to your readers the magnitude of WPA's achievements in the field of adult education and the elimination of illiteracy, you go on to argue that Congress should prune the WPA appropriation so that this work will no longer be carried on! Adult education, you say, is alien to the function of the WPA, and "the creation of jobs for unemployed school teachers does not justify the excursion of the WPA into an alien field."

Presumably you would rather have the Government setting unemployed school teachers to work digging holes in the ground, playing tiddley-winks, or doing anything—so long as it's not education. Then all the proprieties of form and function would be satisfied, and what's more, the Republican papers would be supplied with material for their charges of spendthrift boondoggling on the part of the Democratic Administration.

It is related of Marie Antoinette that she once almost died of cold after taking a bath because the ladies in waiting could not agree as the proper order of precedence in handling her toilette. This is what came near happening to the country as a whole under the Hoover Administration, when three years were spent in arguing as to whether it was right for the Federal Government to "interfere" with State and local governments in coming to the relief of the unemployed.

Following Guernica.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to advise Mr. Alfio Carta who wrote in your May 14 paper that Mr. Pegler did not attack Italians as such, but Fascists. That last deed in Guernica, Spain, alone is enough to arouse anybody against the Fascist criminals. Guernica, the holy city of that useful little race, where a thousand Catholic noncombatants were bombed out of their homes, then machine gunned to death! Guernica! Your horror and screams and torture and tears have finally moved us. Guernica, you shall be avenged.

Washington Sales Tax.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: The sales tax proposed by Corporation Counsel Seal is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of. The major portion of such a tax will fall upon the Government employe, who generally pays State taxes in his home State where he has a bona fide residence.

Statistics show that the Washington merchants fare far better on the average than the average merchant of any other city, thanks to the patronage of Government employes. The average percentage of profit earned by Washington merchants is far above that of other merchants of other large cities. Is it not sufficient that the Government employe bears the burden of exorbitant rents and high prices for food and clothing? Let the landlords and merchants bear their just burden of taxes. They've gotten off pretty easy so far as to tax rates as compared with other cities. M. B. SHABER.

Confusion Over Time.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be quite some confusion in regard to time.

There is but one time, the time that was created with the universe, so why should man try to do the impossible.

We may change the hands of a clock, and when we do, all that has been done is that the clock's hands have been changed, but we have not changed the time.

I am in accord with Post Meridian; we are supposed to be a Nation of thinking people.

Approval For The Proposed Abattoir.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent editorial in The Post, it was commented that "it is strange that the packers planning an abattoir for the Northeast section of the city do not withdraw."

It is likewise equally as strange that the editors of The Post, along with others who voice protests against this project have taken no pains to acquaint themselves with the actual facts concerning the building itself and its operation.

In the first place, the remodeling of the old obsolete plant in Benning is to be commended, inasmuch as about $300,000 will be spent to make this 48-year-old establishment the finest in the country. It isn't something new. The town of Benning was built around the old plant years ago and it provided employment for almost its entire population. Many of the residents have lost or are losing their homes due to this unemployment. Many have been with the plant for 30 years and are experts in their line and know nothing else.

Secondly, whence comes the generally accepted notion that odors will emanate throughout the Middle Atlantic States? With no efforts at intelligent investigation or perusal of plans filed with the Bureau of Animal Industry, the District building inspector's office, or any general attempt to ascertain facts, the hue and cry goes up. Hardly fair, is it?

Actually, the odor, if any, will be negligible. Modern methods and latest patented packing-house machinery will be installed. Odors will be compressed and neutralized, leaving through special sewers. Of course, if the odor of cooking ham and spices is objectionable, that is something else, as cooking odors will be the only ones discernible in the adjacent neighborhood.

"Dried blood will settle over the neighborhood," say so-called experts. It never did in 48 years, so why with ultramodern steam-drying equipment, in leakproof compartments, should it now? Again, this product is extremely valuable, being packaged at once as a high-grade garden fertilizer and placed on your grocer's shelf.

An official is quoted as saying, "Rumbling trucks laden with sheep and cattle will fill the streets." Actually, the plant capacity is only five carloads a day, and these will be unloaded from freight cars on the railroad siding and no provisions are made on the plans for holding any great amount of cattle. So why the rumbling trucks?"

And then again, why not let's have lower prices and fresher meats (12 hours) in the District? Most of our beef here is shipped cold storage from the West. In Baltimore, there is a packing plant operating on a much larger scale, which is adjoined by dwellings. And there is no odor. This plant is not as modern as the proposed plant, which will be odorless. The only reason for an odor is lack of immediate handling, cleanliness and equipment, which is amply provided in the plans, as will be noted upon examination.

As a former officer of a local citizens association, I have made a complete and impartial investigation of the plans, and the capabilities of the architect and am convinced that the opponent "alarmists" do not know whereof they speak. The building itself will be a credit to the community and far outshine any in the section. It will be landscaped and quite acceptable, esthetically and practically, and, as the plans so indicate, has no odors.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Farley's Bluntness.

THOSE AMERICANS who are shocked by James Farley's blunt language in the Supreme Court matter seem to forget, if they ever were aware of, Mr. Farley's career as chairman of the New York Prize Fight Commission. But to those who were close observers of the little dictatorship which ruled the Cauliflower Industry by whim and edict in those days it is no startling news that James would use political pressure to compel a change in the Supreme Court or for any other purpose which seemed laudable to him.

When James was boss of the Prize Fight Commission, he and his two associates had a rule forbidding the presence of questionable characters at the contests of the lithe, lean bodies. Not only were questionable characters to be denied official credentials as managers and seconds, but they were to be barred from the arena even as cash customers in the interests of chivalry and the ideals of American Youth, which, as you may remember, was deriving lofty inspiration from the fairness and fortitude of such models as Jack Sharkey, Charlie Phil Rosenberg and Primo Carnera.

* * * *

But James was also a practical politician on his way to decide the future of the United States Supreme Court, and there came a time when, invariably, at the big fights at the Garden, in the first row of seats, just around the corner from Jim's official throne, there sat a group of the most distinguished booticians and speakeasy magnates of the prohibition era, Mr. Farley knew them all, and all about them—as, indeed, so did everyone in town, for they were very famous operators.

But there he sat in his regular place, and there they sat in theirs, week after week for years, notwithstanding Jim's own rule against questionable characters whose presence might tend to impair the nobility of the sport. What harm they did or what good might have been done by having them out I cannot say, but James had officially recognized some peril in their presence, and there he was and there they were, and there was the rule.

Thus prepared for little departures from conventional enforcement, nobody was much surprised when, on the night of Primo Carnera's debut in the Garden, who should come down the aisle with him to serve as counsel in his corner but Honest Abe Attell, the genius of the Fake World Series of 1919, and Jack Johnson, who had written a book stating that he had thrown his fight with Jess Willard and thus had cast a blot on that which is known as the fairest bauble in Fistiana's crown, the heavyweight championship of the world? And by whose authority were they present but by that of Mr. Farley?

* * * *

There came an occasion later when Old Satch, as Primo came to be called, was barred from pugilism for life on account of a highly unethical episode with one Bombo Chevalier in California in which it appeared that a pistol had been seen. But not long after that there came an occasion when James J. Johnston, Mr. Farley's intimate friend, held a charter on the Brooklyn ball yard and Primo's promise to fight someone for him if Mr. Johnston could arrange amnesty. So, in due course, Primo's life term in banishment was commuted to the time already expired and Primo fought for Mr. Johnston in Brooklyn.

Mr. Farley explained his course in a few practical words. His friend, Mr. Johnston, had a chance to make some money.

"He was my friend," Mr. Farley said. "What good is a friend if he won't help a friend?"

The $1,000,000 fight at which three sportsmen with criminal records served as seconds in the corners was not questioned on that account, for the journalists of sport by now were used to Mr. Farley's relaxations of the rules to suit special circumstances. Those who wrote sport then learned Mr. Farley's methods and something about his political morals which the statesmen and journalists of national politics have been learning gradually these five years and hesitate to believe even now.

* * * *

The heavyweight championship was a beautiful and sacred thing in that phase of Mr. Farley's career, but he lightly tossed it into competition as a political favor to be won by a foul. He was not a boxing man himself, and did not fully appreciate the sanctity of the fairest bauble in Fistiana's crown. Neither is he a constitutional authority, and it is possible that the integrity of the United States Supreme Court is no more impressive as a public treasure now than the heavyweight championship was then.

BOOKS

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

"Fool's Melody"

By Alexandra Brown

THE main setting of this novel by the author of "Miss Tiverton Goes Out" and Michael Cape-Meadows is the home of Dr. Lennard, where, in order to support adequately a family of four children and three grandchildren, he has staying with him and under his care three mild mental cases.

The family consists of a daughter, Olive, who is a trained nurse, another daughter, Penelope, who is bed-ridden and who finally dies under very dramatic circumstances; a third daughter, Doreen, a beautiful girl whose outlook on life has been somewhat warped as a result of an illicit love affair which she has had with one of her father's colleagues, and the youngest daughter, Miranda, never a very clearly defined character, not quite grown up. Then there are the three grandchildren, whose father is a ne'er-do-well and whose mother runs a beauty parlor in New York. Of these, the eldest boy is drowned as the result of an escapade in what is probably the tensest and most exciting scene in the book.

Then there are the three cases. Sidney Patch, a well-known concert pianist suffering from a serious nervous breakdown, is the principal character in the book. There is Tony Severn, a nondescript young man with moderate means and a mild nervous breakdown, who, nonetheless, has his role in the story. And Mrs. Buchanan, an old lady of 93, whose trouble is supposed to be senility. However, there seems very little evidence of it. She goes off into discussions of metaphysics which would certainly tax the strongest mentality.

AS to the story, while it is involved, exciting and, in part at least, very well told, it is merely a vehicle for the thoughts that the authors are trying to express. The characters, while they are alive and interesting, are mouthpieces. It seems a pity, therefore, when the authors went to so much trouble, that the reader should be left with but the very haziest idea of what this message is that they are trying to convey.

There are passages in this book of remarkable beauty. The night the little boy is drowned, Sidney Patch, who, as part of his cure, has been forbidden to touch a piano, yet realizing the terrible mental anguish of the family, by his playing tries to soothe their suffering. "No sleep came to The Moorings in the remainder of that night. But something came—some answering of questions, some lifting of veils; so that the night was found, unexpectedly, to have passed, the thin daylight that replaced it was not merely the 'light of common day,' for there was fused into it, interpenetrating it, an authentic glow of the Light Everlasting." Unfortunately, the writers are less interested in the progress of the narrative than they are in the exposition of their thoughts. So that, to what should be an extremely dramatic passage, they append an anti-climax of philosophizing which is not sufficiently clear to be even barely understandable.

• • • •

AT one point in the story Sidney Patch is committed to an institution, where Tony Severn, convinced both of his sanity and the rare quality of his mind, goes to visit him on the impulse that only he can help clarify his life. Possibly it was clarified for Tony. But the reader is left definitely on a limb. The following quotation is typical:

"You don't mean that all experience is a metaphor? And anyhow why a metaphor—why not a simile, or a parable? And a metaphor of what?"

The ending is the biggest anti-climax of all. Patch, having straightened out most of the lives of those around him and having caused Doreen, at one time engaged to Tony Severn, to realize that it was really him she loved, leaving Tony to the youngest sister, Miranda, dies expeditiously of a convenient aneurism.

Some of the characterization in this story is excellent. Some of it is very nebulous. The most strongly drawn character is the doctor to whom Doreen gave her first love. He is sheer evil incarnate, and yet perfectly plausible and human.

• • • •

AS to what symbolism is intended in this story, it is hard to say. Possibly each reader is expected to interpret it according to his own lights. A possible approach to a general summary might be that everyone must find his own truth in his own way. For some, it may be in music, for some, it may be in a game. But each should look for it.

The best thing that can be said about this novel is that it is almost impossible for the reader to lay it down until he has finished it.

A Poet and an Emigre Speak

Stephen Spender and Nickolai Gubsky Have Their Say About the World Today.

"FORWARD FROM LIBERALISM," by Stephen Spender. (Random House, $2).

Dean Swift once satirized "poets turned economists." Poets are rarely economists, but invariably they have a gospel to spread. Charts and curves and statistics don't rattle their brains, but their impressionable natures and emotional fancies do.

Poets, playwrights, novelists and artists who find an outlet for their disturbed idealism in communism are, I imagine, usually victims of the inherent dramatic qualities of their portrayals of things as they are or things as they romantically should be; they are swept into the swirls of fanciful ideology by reaction against their own genius. But what matter if they are not economists? Certainly there are economists who can back them up with statistics and curves and charts.

To appreciate the "attitude of mind" expressed in this prose work of an English communist poet, one must consider that Stephen Spender's poems express vividly the sentiments of the downtrodden proletariat as Spender senses them, and that, having little acquaintance with Marxian dogma and proscribing himself within no party lines, he gives us "the outlines of a personal attitude toward communism."

He argues not in the trite terms of class struggle, dialectical materialism, etc., but as a poet who thinks "the final aim of civilized men must be an unpolitical age, where conditions of peace and security are conductive to a classical art, rooted not in a small oligarchy, but in the lives of the whole people." As communists must, Spender looks to Russia. He finds that far from being "unpolitical," Russia is the most political of nations.

Spender negates the liberalism of Godwin and J. S. Mill and vents his distaste for the "reform" liberalism of the past century. His own ideas are ineffectively stated, because his conclusions are inflated bubbles which burst when touched with the points of precise logic; a defect hardly compensated for by his fluid prose.

JOHN WILLARD.

"ANGRY DUST," by Nikolai Gubsky. (Oxford University Press, $3.50.)

The first of this year's crop of bared souls has recently been offered us by the little known Nickolai Gubsky, Russian emigre, cosmopolite, one time noble bureaucrat. It is a good "intimate autobiography" and makes for enjoyable reading. By November it should have influenced some fine confessions.

His sketches of Russian character are absorbing. No doubt he calls on extremes, but despite the effectiveness of this device, his theory of personal relationships motivates a belief that these neurotic and highly sensitive individuals have had the greatest influence upon him. They are ruled by emotions that are as inconstant as the winds. The nocturnal note is passion; pride and spirit are "dominant in the daylight, or, with typical impetuousness, vice versa.

Reading "Angry Dust" you will gloat from time to time over some glaring weakness in the author's thought, but beware, gentle reader, lest you blunder into the pitfalls as I did. When you have put it aside and allowed the first layer of dust to settle on its cheery cover, perhaps you will open it again and agree with me that Nickolai Gubsky is interesting, not great; clever, not original; serious, not profound, and enjoyable, but certainly not uplifting. I give him three stars and an asterisk.

East and West Below the Equator

Ambassador to Brazil Writes Reliably on Rio.

"RIO," by Hugh Gibson. (Doubleday, Doran, $3.50.)

"There are no modern books on Rio, and most of the magazine articles which appear from time to time are nothing more than rehashes of previous articles, repeating the same familiar inaccuracies." This sentence from the preface of Mr. Hugh Gibson's new book on Rio expresses an opinion in which we heartily concur.

The same might be said of literature about South America as a whole. We have been treated to an avalanche of violently prejudiced books, such as "Gomez, Tyrant of the Andes," by Thomas Rourke, and Carleton Beals' "Fire on the Andes," which represent the point of view of the soft-boiled Greenwich Village parlor pink. We also have the buncombe school of writers, which pander to the lower tastes of moviegoers, and bring forth exaggerated tripe about the jungle, such as "Green Hell" and Layarre's Munchausian tales. Of honest, virile writing have we none, save Peter Fleming's rollicking "Brazilian Adventure."

There is nothing more infuriating to one who knows and likes South America, than to see the unfortunate light in which it is presented, and to read detailed descriptions of places where the author has evidently never been, and character studies of persons he has never known. By putting enough names, dates and places a writer easily leads his less informed readers to believe he knows the truth. It is obvious that the average man has no way of checking up on him.

There is certainly more than one degree of misrepresentation of facts which finds its way into books on South America.

There is the incident of a well-known "explorer," who reported to his sponsors the loss of his entire equipment in a jungle river, and had actually taken the occasion to sell his boats and supplies to traders in the interior at a handsome profit to himself. This is exploitation which hurts only the unsuspecting backers. But when an author twists tales of local politics and presents the most innocent of routine happenings as evidence of a malignant imperialism, such writing is deliberately misleading, and may well counteract years of effort on the part of our own diplomats and foreign managers in building up good will and peace.

No one likes to see his country slandered, and our South American neighbors may feel rightly indignant at practically all that has been written about them and the consequent unsympathetic light in which they are made to appear. It is therefore refreshing to find in Mr. Gibson's "Rio" a book which, if not brilliantly written, has some excellent photographs, and presents one of the most fascinating cities of the world in a favorable light.

For years United States Ambassador to Brazil, Mr. Gibson has been in an excellent position from which to see and to know the city of Rio de Janeiro. He proposes not to make his book a directory for sightseeing, nor in any sense a guide book, but wants rather to give a more general picture of the Brazilian capital. There is no political color here, and Mr. Gibson has limited himself to a description of the scenic beauties of Rio, and the present day customs of the people. The chapters in which he draws upon his more specific experience, such as stag shooting and the annual carnival are perhaps the most successful.

It is interesting to see that in Mr. Gibson's preface he writes that his book was originally planned as a collection of photographs. Certainly the fine illustrations which he has used add greatly to the attraction of the volume, and bring more persuasion to the growing feeling in this country that South America deserves far more travel and appreciation than it has yet received from us.

Palms Under Southern Skies.

"THE LAND THAT TIME FORGOT," by Michael J. Leahy and Maurice Crain. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., $3).

Impelled by a desire to search for the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow, Michael J. Leahy ended up by exploring the unexplored interior of New Guinea. When news reached him that gold had been discovered on Edie Creek, some miles inward from the coast, Leahy, like many others, made a mad dash for New Guinea—and sudden wealth! Although Leahy found gold, his greatest "find" was in mapping out the interior of this forbidden country for the rest of the world.

Prior to 1933, large sections of the interior of New Guinea were labeled "unexplored" by cartologists. Today, as a result of Leahy's sundry expeditions with native carriers, the blank atlas has been localized with informative names and data. Leahy tells us that some quarter of a million savages live in the unexplored area very much as their aboriginal ancestors lived. The natives are accomplished agriculturists, love swine-flesh (to say nothing of a human tidbit now and then), will steal at the slightest provocation, and are as harmless as tigers.

Leahy does not dramatize his material like some pseudo-explorers who would have you think their experiences would put a movie serial writer to shame. He narrates his experiences without emotion, and the result is more impressive than that achieved by the ga-ga school of authors.

Nor must it be assumed that Leahy traversed a territory of tame men. The killing of Capt. Bernard McGrath, an explorer who spent three years with Sir Douglas Mawson in the Antarctic, and the missionaries Morscheuser and Eugene, indicate that danger and death lurked behind every bush.

Leahy gives three reasons why New Guinea was unexplored: "First, it is one of the most rugged countries in the world, with climate and topography both combining to keep the white man out. Take Switzerland or the State of Colorado, and drop it down into the southern ocean near the equator, overspread its peaks and gorges with a rank tangle of tropical vegetation, put in a wide barrier of malarial swamps to guard its borders, pollute it with tropical diseases, add a malignant assortment of poisonous snakes and insects for variety, and you have a fair idea why New Guinea has remained one of the last spots on this planet to be explored and mapped.

"Second, there is very little in New Guinea, aside from gold, which white men value.

"Third—a natural result of the other two—the establishment of white control over the island was started only a generation ago, and is still far from complete. To this day there are only 200 or 300 whites in the whole western half of New Guinea held by the Dutch."

Leahy's discoveries have been rewarded with bestowal upon him of numerous honors, including the Murchison Grant by the Royal Geographical Society.

If you enjoy adventure and suspense and love to read of strange and forbidden countries, don't overlook "The Land That Time Forgot." It is stranger than fiction. Some excellent photographs taken by the author supplement the text.

Pioneer Days

"PIONEERING IN AGRICULTURE," by Thomas Clark Atkeson and Mary Meek Atkeson. (Orange Judd, $3.)

Thomas Clark Atkeson's autobiography is far more than the story of a prominent citizen's useful life—it is the story of American agriculture from the days immediately following the Civil War until present times. The hopes, the disappointments, the progress of those who till the soil are told by one who remained of them. Indeed, Dr. Atkeson's modest account of his accomplishments—edited by his daughter—reveals an insight into the problems of his fellow countrymen that is greatly missed since his death in 1935.

Dr. Atkeson, from 1919 until his retirement in 1927, represented the National Grange at Washington. Only one chapter of the book, however, is given to discussion of these years. Happily, the bulk of its pages records the author's energetic, observing youth in antebellum West Virginia; and the manner in which he advanced agriculture in that State, and so in the rest of the Nation. Organization of farmers, primarily to study their problems and to learn how to meet them, was the keynote of Dr. Atkeson's life. He organized the first "farmer's institute" in the country in 1872; brought into being and became first dean of the College of Agriculture at West Virginia University; began the State college "farmer's weeks" that are now so prominent in our national life.

Dr. Atkeson's story fulfills all that he has to say of it—his life—in a concluding paragraph. I quote: "As I look back across my experience, with such information as I have of the men of my generation, am inclined to think that I have touched and worked for and with agricultural problems more than any other living man, and with some measure of success—and I trust not entirely without benefit to my co-workers in that divinely instituted occupation."

Agriculture

"SUNS GO DOWN," by Flannery Lewis. (Macmillan, $2.)

Here we have the reliving of a day on which the sun has set. The pioneers flock to the mines again, as alive as they were almost a century ago. Flannery Lewis gives them back their day; the dawn of their hardships, the noontide of prosperity, when even the handles of the coaches were gold, and finally the abandoned houses sunk into the emptied earth.

Those days were worth living, if one could manage it. In Virginia City, Nev., there was at least one funeral a day, "most of the citizens being impulsive." Murder, usually represented as self-defense, was rarely more than a fining offense, and gold was plentiful. The men were hard, and would as soon shoot as argue. They were courageous; they had to be.

Flannery Lewis tells his story with the apparent ease that accompanies sincerity in writing. Although this is a memoir, it is not sentimental, nor has it a yearning, retrospective tone. We are indebted to grandmother for this last. Once, when explaining what was wrong with motion pictures, she observed: "* * * they try to revive one's memories and stir the emotions. Such effort is vulgar."

Book Ends

If you are interested in learning to write for magazines or report for newspapers, or just keen on good writing for its own sake, don't miss the story of the coronation by Rebecca West . . . It's in this month's issue of Stage Magazine, and has as many good angles as a movie star . . . There are several paragraphs strangely reminiscent of the tortuous technique of Frances Newman . . . But without the torture.

Congressman Lanham says his nephew, Edwin, whose book, "Banners at Daybreak," is a stirring piece of work, is a quiet, reticent chap . . .

BETT HOOPER.

Several incidents in Edwin's latest novel are based on fact, but the book is in no sense to be regarded as autobiographical . . . The fine artistic background of "Banners at Daybreak" manages to maintain its authentic note because the author is himself a commercial artist.

Recently Gertrude Atherton received an honorary LL.D. from the University of California . . . There were said to be 7,000 people present . . . Throughout the ceremony Mrs. Atherton's only fear was that at the psychological moment she would respond with the words, "I do" . . . I can understand how Peggy Hopkins Joyce might feel that way . . . But not Mrs. Atherton.

I have just received a very flossy announcement from Doubleday, Doran that they are moving from 244 Madison avenue to Rockefeller Center . . . It is said that Farrar & Rinehart lavishly redecorated their offices under Anthony Adverse's steam . . . And that Macmillan paid handsome Christmas bonuses on the strength of that sirocco from the South . . . Now I'm trying to figure out just which of D. & D.'s best-sellers was responsible for their calling out the moving van.

Seven years later at a luncheon in London, a man with a perfect Oxford accent addressed the group and asked Mr. Wells if two teeth were not missing from the upper side of his mouth . . . Behavior

"CONTROLLING HUMAN BEHAVIOR," by Daniel Starch, Hazel M. Stanton and Wilhelmine Koerth. (Macmillan Co., $4.)

From the earliest to present time, the literature of the world has been devoted, for the most part, to telling man how to behave. Every philosophy has laid down rules of conduct which have been confirmed and restated by every succeeding generation. The only difference between the philosophy of Socrates, Plato, Descartes and Emerson and that of James, Dewey, Freud and the authors of the book under review is one of terms; the difference, if any there is, between philosophy and psychology.

If I were forced to choose between the old philosophy and the new psychology, I should unhesitatingly choose the former, because the one is reminiscent of our earliest parental injunctions, easy to comprehend if not easy to heed, while the other is a confusion of terms which leave me utterly frustrated.

This is not to say that we shall not search for whatever may be good in the new guides to human conduct, but that we shall not need any guide whatever if we are capable of understanding such a book as "Controlling Human Behavior." For example, we are told that thinking is a "new resource which frees the organism from the natural panorama and order of nature, permitting it to deal with matters far removed from scene and sound; the gain lies not only in disengaging the organism from the flow of natural events as perceived, it lies also in the creation of functional by-products which have extraordinary uses for man."

If, after having read a chapter on "How to Think," I encounter such a statement as this, is it not little wonder—or is it not?—that my thought processes are in confusion and that, like Omar, I come out of the same door through which I went in?

The authors treat every aspect of human behavior exhaustively and have compiled a mass of material in support of their theories. Their book will doubtless find its way among the college textbooks, but it leaves a book for the millions who need an instructive guide for their behavior still to be written.

"The People"

"PEOPLE ON THE EARTH," by Edwin Corle. (Random House, $2).

"People on the Earth" is, being translated, Navajo on his Desert. Navajos call themselves the People; all others—Hopis, Utes, Americans from "Washintone"—are outlandish. The opening scenes of this novel are untainted Indian the earliest omen is a shadow cast by the first droning airplane over the mesa. It was a bird that neither descended nor looked down, but in its wake came an eclipse of the sun, a drought, the influenza of 1918, and Stratton the preacher, of whom they said: "Kindly Man is kind, but he is not honest." He tried to rear the Indian orphan, whom he rescued, to live the beliefs he himself only thought and taught. The boy became an educated Indian.

This is Mr. Corle's third Indian book. His "Mojave" and "Fig Tree John" are said to have "won glowing reviews and practically no sales." "People on the Earth" probably deserves a better fate. It is rendered in simple, moving prose and presents an honest and intelligent picture of the Southwest.

PAUL H. OEHSER.

Canada to M. Siegfried

By Denys Smith

THE author of "America Comes of Age," M. Andre Siegfried, has turned his attention to America's northern neighbor, the Dominion of Canada. He finds it has not yet come of age and possibly never will. In fact by page 295 he is "tempted to ask the disturbing question, "Is Canada a Nation?"

Canadians, however, should not be downcast. In time there may be a Canadian culture, "Anglo-French in its origins and institutions; but American in its geographical atmosphere, with a touch of poetry and grandeur from the Far North." The country's chief trouble is that she is a state without body, always tempted to seek a center of gravity outside her own borders. M. Siegfried seems to consider her as the very opposite of the Austrian Empire; if she did not already exist there would be no earthly reason why anybody should want to invent her.

This is not to suggest that M. Siegfried treats his subject with lack of sympathy. Only that he has the ability to climb the lofty pinnacle of complete detachment and survey the scene, aloof and impartial, like God contemplating an ant hill.

• • • •

AS a Frenchman, however, his heart obviously warms to the French-Canadian population and their outlook on life. With them the soil "is a mode of life, not a means of making a fortune." They appear all the more worthy contrasted with the avid soil-robbing farmers of the West. In French Canada, farming "is not industry disguised, and can still be called agriculture." In France, unemployed industrialists can always fall back on the land, but the spectacle of farmers in western Canada and the United States starving on their land and drifting to the cities for relief fills M. Siegfried with astonishment.

Despite the powers of resistence shown by the French-Canadian, M. Siegfried is not sure that they, along with the rest of Canada, will not be "Americanized." The west-east pull of England and France will not be able to neutralize the more natural north-south pull of the United States.

M. SIEGFRIED sponsored America's coming of age party some years ago, and since that time there have been changes. America itself is possibly a little less "Americanized." In fact, if you take the two forces tugging at Canada in two important spheres—first, foreign policy, and second, political philosophy, you can no longer say that the tug is in opposite directions. Mr. Eden might be operating in Spain with the American neutrality act in front of him, and the drafters of many New Deal measures might have been copying from British texts. The two influences of England and America are not always antagonistic. To take a minor example, a Dominion M. P. would have a more comprehensive grasp of what was happening in England if he read nothing but the New York Times than if he confined himself exclusively to the Ottawa Citizen.

Some of M. Siegfried's conclusions might have been modified if he had been writing a year later. His emphasis on the strength of the "natural" north-south axis in the Western Hemisphere, compared with the artificial east-west axis, which in time would possibly break down existing state lines and give rise to a political Pan-America, might have been less after the Buenos Aires conference had shown the east-west pull was still powerful. He was writing, too, before the recent crown crisis had shown how the stream of public opinion in Canada could run directly contrary to the main stream in the United States, and how, in the absence of any legal unity, the British Empire still could act as a unit.

He might also have felt impelled to change his statement that if Canada were embroiled with a foreign power "the Monroe Doctrine obviously would protect her." The guarantee in the neutrality act that trade will not be interrupted in case of war, while the opponent will be hampered by a ban on arms and loans and the cash and carry provisions is less reassuring.

M. Siegfried has some interesting observations on the Canadian's attitude to England and the United States. His views might be succinctly expressed as: Canadians like England, but dislike the English, whereas they dislike America, but like the Americans.

In general, M. Siegfried finds that the association of Canada with England is a force which is leading England away from the European continent and reinforcing Anglo-American collaboration.

Madariaga Deserts Realism

"ANARCHY OR HIERARCHY," by Salvador de Madariaga. (Macmillan, $2.50.)

To anyone perusing Senor de Madariaga's latest book on "Anarchy or Heirarchy," it no longer seems surprising that he is an exile from his war-torn nation, lecturing on internationalism and world peace while the fate of Spain, and perhaps of the world, depends upon the outcome of the civil strife now going on in that unfortunate country. For Senor de Madariaga seems to have that complete contempt for reality which characterizes so many of his fellow Spaniards. He is the idealist in a changing social structure of harsh realities, in short, a Don Quixote of the modern world. No doubt the same enthusiams will be felt by many readers for Madariaga's hardihood in clinging to his theoretical conception of an organic democracy that is inspired by the heroic extravagances of Vervantes' immortal hero.

The first part of "Anarchy or Hierarchy" is a critical examination of the practices of liberal democracy and the reasons for their inadequacy in the face of the present economic crisis. The chief reasons for democracy's failure are the lack of leadership, the invasion of the technical expert, the tyrannical powers of the financier and the industrialist, the degeneration of political institutions, especially the parliamentary system and the private ownership of the press.

Some of the statements made in the course of the analysis are bound to strike the American reader as fanciful, namely that "many good observers believe that the 1929 crash which started our present crisis was determined by the policy stubbornly pursued by the unaided and unfettered brain and conscience of the then governor of the Federal Reserve Bank (presumably he means Mr. George Harrison, of the New York Reserve Board), whose power of life and death (bread and hunger) over men far exceeded those of any czar." No less exaggerated is Mr. Madariaga's conception of the power of the press whose influence on political life he claims "is nearly as important as, and some times more important, than Parliament."

It is in the second part of the book in which Madariaga outlines his suggestions on the theory and structure of "unanimous organic democracy" that the quixotic nature of the Spanish statesman's mentality reveals itself. Society has a "natural" shape and "a glance at any familiar people or nation of Western Europe should provide us with valuable points as to nature's own ideas on this matter." A constant trend of social life reproduces the same general design in all human communities, namely a division into three layers which go by the names of people, middle-class (bourgeoisie) and aristocracy.

"The people is a mass and therefore—for mass means dough—passive and plastic. The social function of the people is chorus-like.

"The bourgeoisie incarnates intelligence which consists in seeing clearly what others have discovered and carrying out accurately what others have decided.

"But the higher activities of the community are incumbent on the aristocracy. It should be meant and understood as the sum total of the men who, in a healthy community, are actually entrusted with the duties and responsibility of leadership by virtue of their inherent superiority, i. e., the men with the gift of creative intuition, the statesmen. Above all, the statesman is naturally free from the small passions—selfishness, egotism, jealousy, vanity.

"The people, made up of peasants, rooted in the earth and devoted to it, constitute the repository of the past; the bourgeoisie, the class which stands for technique, intelligence, order and culture, represents the state of things and the present, and the aristocracy, a small but creative group of men gifted with vision and self denial, see the future and prepare its advent with their disinterested activity.

"And right through society the lazy, the poor in spirit or in body, the feeble, the weak, fatally fall toward the 'proletariat.'"

It comes as a natural postulate that Madariaga takes all those to task who want to educate the people or "peasants." He says it is a "romantic attitude" to talk about "liberating the peasant with 'books,' 'the lights of learning' and 'schools'"

Whoever has enough confidence in Madariaga's political science, as revealed in these quotations, to say nothing of his economics and psychology, can find out how he organizes this "natural society into a unanimous organic democracy" by reading the last chapter of his book.

Governmental Economy Seen By Roosevelt

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt expects economies to be made in Government expenditures during the balance of this fiscal year, he said at his press conference yesterday, as a result of reports made by heads of the executive departments.

On April 13 the President addressed a letter to heads of all executive departments, agencies and independent establishments, calling on them to examine the status of their appropriations and activities, "with a view to making a substantial saving by eliminating or deferring all expenditures which are not absolutely necessary at this time." He warned that "the deficit will be for greater than was anticipated unless there is an immediate curtailment of expenditures," and instructed the heads of departments and other establishments to report by May 1 on the prospects of making economies.

Asked yesterday if he could reveal the reports, Mr. Roosevelt said he had not checked them closely, but all of those called on had reported with excellent co-operation. He added he expected to make the economies.

The President said also it would be a pretty good guess that he would send a message on wage and hour legislation to Congress fairly soon.

Within a few days, it was added, the consultative peace, economic and cultural conventions adopted last December at the Buenos Aires All-America peace conference will be sent to the Senate. Asked whether their ratification would be sought ahead of action on the sanitary convention with Argentina, long before the Senate and eagerly desired by Secretary of State Hull, the President replied that he was unable to say.

On farm legislation, Mr. Roosevelt said the Department of Agriculture felt that, by and large, the proposal submitted by a group of farm leaders last week was along the right lines. He said that while he had not read the proposed legislation, Secretary Wallace and his aids felt its principles were pretty good and the proposal was being taken up with the proper committees.

The plan, called "the agricultural adjustment act of 1937," by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation and one of its sponsors, combines Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" idea with a new system of benefit payments and production control. The Department of Agriculture, it was announced last week, will not submit a plan of its own, but Wallace and other department officials conferred at some length Saturday with the farm leaders who drafted the new proposal.

The President caused some surprise when, in reply to questions, he said he would not send a message to Congress on a power and flood control plan. It had been understood he planned to send recommendations for a number of regional authorities similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority, to cover the country in the interest of flood control, reforestation, control of soil erosion and sale and distribution of power produced by flood control projects.

After the press conference a secretary explained that the President did not intend to send a message on flood control and power alone, but his recommendations on these subjects would be included among those on national planning.

Tennessee Aluminum Workers Go on Strike

Alcoa, Tenn., May 18 (U.P.).—Demanding elimination of wage differentials existing between Northern and Southern works of the Aluminum Corporation of America, more than 3,000 employes of the huge Alcoa plants struck shortly before midnight tonight.

Picket lines were thrown around the plants as first shifts filed out in a heavy rainstorm.

Officer Ousted In Baltimore Vice Inquiry

Police Seen in Houses, Federal Witness Testifies.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 18.—Lieut. Edward Hitzelberger was suspended from the police force today after his name had been mentioned by witnesses at vice hearings before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen.

Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither suspended Hitzelberger, although he pointed out that no charges of any kind had been preferred against the officer.

Edith Dupree, a colored woman, testified yesterday that Hitzelberger had been responsible for her getting a job with Carroll (Cappy) Goldstein. The latter was arrested during recent vice raids and ordered held in $20,000 bail on Mann act charges.

Caroline St. John, held in $1,500 bail as a Federal witness, said today she had seen Hitzelberger at the home of Betty Byrd, who was taken into custody during the raids. The Byrd woman was held in $5,000 bail on Mann act charges.

The St. John girl, in identifying Hitzelberger, also said Sergt. August Bierman was with the officer at the house. She asserted that Hitzelberger asked her to go for a ride with him.

The Federal authorities pressed their investigation resulting from Saturday's raids as J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, asserted in Washington "we intend to go to the bottom of this situation regardless of whom it hits."

Labor Chooses J. P. McCurdy As D. C. Leader

Has No Opposition in Md. or Capital Elections; Vote Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 18.—Joseph P. McCurdy, of Baltimore, was nominated without opposition today for re-election as president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor at the annual convention here. The election will be held tomorrow.

Other officers nominated were vice presidents, six to be elected, John Locher, Robert E. Lester, Rose Brunswick, and Janet Gaines, of Washington; F. N. Kershaw, J. Kingston Howard, J. M. Buzby and Soloman Caplis, of Baltimore; Walter Grant, Pat Allender, George Conley and S. A. Graham, of Cumberland, and John L. Geist, Hagerstown.

Secretary, Frank J. Coleman and Henry Rhine, Washington; treasurer, J. E. Toone, Washington; organizer, Harry Thompson, Washington; delegate to American Federation of Labor convention, Joseph P. McCurdy.

Chief among the resolutions adopted today were: Advocating high single license in Maryland; prohibiting women and persons less than 21 years of age serving in bars; advocating 8-hour working day for all laborers, and advocating two-men street cars and buses in Washington.

The annual banquet was held tonight.

Cohen Case Up.

The conviction of Harry Cohen, labor organizer, after the taxicab strikes in Baltimore last winter, was brought to the convention floor by Frank Clark Ellis, president of the Building Trades Council of Baltimore.

Ellis charged that Cohen was tried and found guilty by "a manufactured jury" during his trials before Judge Eugene O'Dunne on charges resulting from disturbances during the strikes.

"The cab drivers wanted to organize," Ellis declared. "Delegate Cohen, of the teamsters, was prevailed upon to act as organizer. Because of his activities Cohen was dragged in on a bench warrant which carried with it $25,000 bail.

Money Needed.

"I don't know any union man who has $25,000 bail.

"He was tried and found guilty by a 'manufactured jury.' We in Baltimore organized a defense fund. This is not a Cohen defense fund, but a labor defense fund.

"Up to the present time, with the help of the American Federation of Labor unions, we have paid approximately $16,000. We need money."

Acquittal Plea Thrown Out in Contempt Case

Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court, yesterday denied an application for a directed verdict of not guilty in the trial of L. Douglas Rice, vice president and general manager of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., who is under indictment on a charge of contempt of the United States Senate.

Rice, along with other officers and employes of the company, was ordered to appear before the La Follette Committee investigating civil liberties. He is alleged to have failed to respond to the summons, and in addition is charged with having destroyed papers and documents wanted for inspection by the committee. Both of these charges he has steadfastly denied.

In asking for a directed verdict of not guilty, attorneys representing Rice, who is the first of six to go on trial, stressed their claim that the Government had failed to make out a case and that Rice should be acquitted by Justice Gordon.

Meantime, Justice Gordon had stated that persons under subpena, either in the courts or before the proper tribunal, should appear and raise their objections there, rather than to enter a nonappearance and refuse to honor the summons.

Rice propably will take the stand day and his attorneys said late yesterday the case may be ended late in the evening.

Southeast Citizens Assail Time Bill

Unanimously opposing the adoption of daylight-savings time for the District during the summer, the Southeast Citizens Association closed its season activities last night at the Eleventh Precinct Station.

After the King bill, now pending in the Senate to employ three directors for a new board of welfare, was indorsed the group heard C. A. Barker speak on the abattoir construction and then opposed it.

Another resolution favored the curtailment of taxicabs in the District from 4,000 to 2,500. Deletion of $38,000 in the District budget for the Children's Receiving Home was condemned in a resolution.

My cousin Milford was drivin' along in a buggy one day and he suddenly felt that he was goin' up a steep hill. This feelin' kept up for two hours and he got to feelin' sorry for the horse and then after while, he got to noticin' that the air was gettin' a lot lighter from such a high altitude.

Pretty soon he got short of breath and his heart started to pound and finally he met a man and he hollered to him, "How much further is it to the top of the hill?" The man looked around and says, "You ain't goin' up no hill, brother, you've lost both of your hind wheels."

Notes

The North Carolina Democratic Club of Washington is sponsoring an Independence Ball in commemoration of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration . . . They have fixed tomorrow night for the affair; the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel is the scene . . . William M. Hodges heads the committee on arrangements . . .

And General Accounting Office Lodge, No. 8—which currently has a load of trouble in the projected dismissals of some 300 G. A. O. employes—are preparing also to dance . . . Their date is Saturday and the place the Wardman Park Hotel . . . Some member of the lodge, perhaps himself (or herself) feeling the threat of the ax, has had the good humor to pen a verse about the dance, which runs as follows: "There are barrels and barrels of fun in store, for all who love the terpsichore; For Lodge No. 8 of the A. F. G. E., is giving a dance for you and for me; the scene of this fascinating lark, is the East Ballroom of the Wardman Park . . . We'll laugh and dance the time away, to the strains of music bright and gay; and no one else will mind our noise, with the tunes from Happy Walker's boys; so come along if you want some fun, Saturday night from 10 'till 1.

Officials of G. A. O. Lodge, No. 8, worked hard trying to obtain two weeks' leave for the G. A. O. temporary employes threatened—in fact, practically certain of—dismissal by June 30. They gave a lot of their time in conference with the personnel officer trying to gain concessions for the men and women whose jobs are definitely under the ax . . . And then, when they called a meeting the other night to report on the progress of their activities, just a handful of the temporary employes were present . . . The presiding officer said flatly that he was disappointed and was a little put out by the indifference . . . Another meeting is in the offing and in the meanwhile, rumors are current that the number to get the ax may exceed the first announced figure . . . With this doom in the air, they may turn out better the next time . . .

Rural electrification has gotten a boost out of the prospect of Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock training in the Wisconsin woods for his next fight. The Rural Electrification News makes a fairly good-sized headline of it.

Recently, says the R. E. A. official publication, the State Public Service Commission received an application from the Lake Superior District Power Co. for authority to extend rural electric lines in the towns of Sand Lake, Stone Lake and Edgewater, Sawyer County. Later a telegram was received from Walter J. Hodgkins, company president, to the commission:

"On March 13, we gave notice of our intention to construct a line in the town of Sand Lake. Braddock plans to train in the territory and the people demand immediate service. What shall we do?"

The commission obtained from the State rural electrification coordination, a waiver of objection to the extension and authorized the company by return telegram to make the Sand Lake extension and also to build lines in Stone Lake.

Show Man Overcome By Mysterious Odor

Golder Stewart, assistant manager of the Carolina Theater at 105 Eleventh street southeast, made an exploratory jaunt into the upper rafters of the structure last night to seek the source of a strange odor. He failed to return or answer the hails of Harold McDonald, the manager.

The fire rescue squad was summoned. Members of the squad found Stewart lying in the rafters unconscious from suffocation. They brought him down and revived him.

Alley Board's Condemning Right Upheld

Owners, However, Have Several Avenues of Attack Open.

The right of the Alley Dwelling Authority to condemn property in Washington under recently granted authority from Congress was upheld temporarily in District Court late yesterday when Chief Alfred A. Wheat dismissed a challenge to the act's constitutionality.

The act was attacked when the Government sought to condemn property located between Enghth and Ninth and G and E streets southwest, where it sought to have eight properties taken over at condemnation prices. The move was fought by the American Security and Trust Co., which acted as trustee for owners of some of the land.

Justice Wheat's ruling was made without comment on a technical pleading filed by attorneys for the trust company. It was emphasized that the ruling was not final as there were several avenues open to the property owners, in all of which they could renew their supplication.

The Government, it was said, merely desired to take over the property, and had no idea what it would do with it now. It was an attempt to follow the declared intention of the alley dwelling act to discontinue the use of dwellings or buildings situated in alleys, and to "eliminate the use of hidden communities in inhabited alleys * * * in the interest of public health comfort, morals, safety and welfare."

In opposing the dismissal of the condemnation proceedings, the Government, through Attorneys H. H. Glassie and Alexander H. Bell, jr., said the "obvious purpose of the statute is to eliminate through payment of adequate compensation, that entire class of human habitations which for half a century has been recognized as a continuing menace to the health, safety, morals and welfare of the community."

In opposing the project, the attorneys for the property owners said the land was not being taken for public uses and was not therefore subject to condemnation.

Justice Wheat ruled that the act was constitutional and that the Department of Justice could proceed to condemn the property deemed necessary.

The ruling is expected to be challenged in various forms by the owners of the property, thus holding up a final adjudication of the constitutionality of the authority.

Federal Officials Study Leave Rules

A new study of the regulations governing leave was begun yesterday by administrative officers of the Government preparatory to recommending to the President changes calculated to adjust situations which have arisen since leave regulations and rules went into effect last July.

The administrative officers, meeting yesterday morning with the Civil Service Commission, decided to refer existing questions and problems of the two committees which originally framed the regulations.

Frank A. Birgfeld, chief clerk of the Treasury, heads the committee on annual leave. P. L. Gladmon, chief clerk of the Agriculture Department, heads the group on sick leave.

Problems that could not be anticipated when the regulations were drawn have in the meantime arisen, the officers reported. These have been caused by the varying interpretations placed on the regulations by the officers themselves. They believed the President should be asked to make changes to end unintentional inequities.

Daniel Ring Named To Maritime Post

Appointment of Daniel S. Ring, one-time Washington newspaperman and at present assistant administrator of WPA in New York, as a member of the labor relations staff of the Maritime Commission, was announced here yesterday.

For almost two years Ring, widely known in legal circles in the Capital, has been stationed in Manhattan. During the World War he served in the Navy.

Before taking up the practice of law, Ring was a member of the staff of the old Washington Herald and the Evening Star. He was with the NRA at the time of its demise, and joined WPA when the Supreme Court ruled against it. He practiced law here, and is married and the father of five children. Information was not available as to when Ring would assume his duties here.

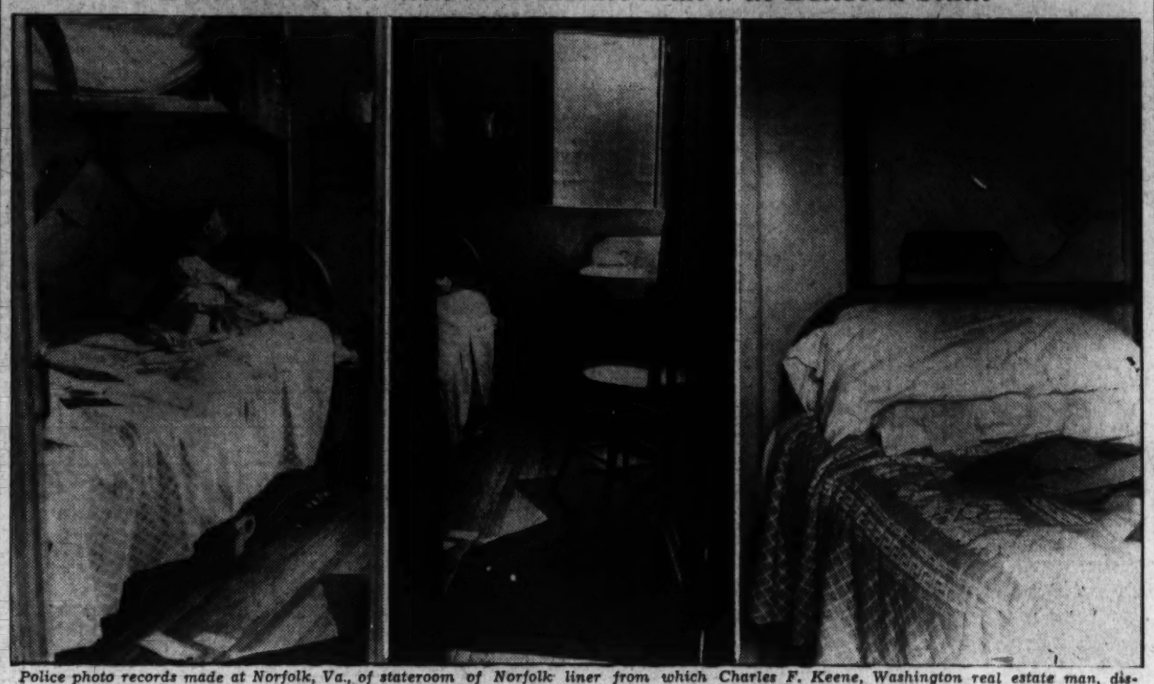
Stateroom in Which Real Estate Man Was Believed Slain



Police photo records made at Norfolk, Va., of stateroom of Norfolk liner from which Charles F. Keene, Washington real estate man, disappeared while en route to the Virginia city, were made available to Maryland State authorities who took over the investigation after Norfolk police listed the case as murder. Views of the blood-spattered room showed a general disarray and in photo at right, bed, although mussed up, had not been slept in. Detectives claim room showed signs of scuffle.

D. C. Children Rank High in Outside Care

National Social Worker Presents Juvenile Welfare Report.

C. C. Carstens, executive director of the Child Welfare League of America, declared yesterday that Washington has one of the highest figures of any city in the country for children who are in care away from their homes as he summarized data presented at a luncheon of the child welfare committee of the Council of Social Agencies.

Carsten's talk was preceded by submission of a report on progress being made in the survey here of all child welfare agencies on behalf of the league which Carstens directs.

"Boston," Carstens stated, "has 62 children out of 100,000; Philadelphia, 54; Washington, 44; Cleveland, 31, and Birmingham, 13 children who are being cared for outside of their homes.

"The high figure in Boston is due to the fact that the program for foster home care both in families and in institutions is broader than in most other cities. Convalescents, cardiacs and other children who cannot be classed as dependents are represented in this figure, and in analyzing Washington's statistics in this department the type of program is an important factor. The question, therefore, is 'Has Washington too many children who are being cared for away from their homes?' We don't know as yet," said Carstens.

"Washington, for example, has to take care of more colored children than any other city in the United States. This may affect the situation. We must find out where the facts lie. We do know, however, even at this stage of the survey, that there are too many different agencies in Washington working at the same job—in other words, that greater specialization is needed.

"I am also convinced," Carstens added, "that private foster family care must be greatly developed here. We shall be able to talk more convincingly on this point when we have additional data."

At the end of the meeting Mrs. Eugene Meyer, chairman of the Washington committee of the Child Welfare Leage of America, reminded the representatives of all agencies at the meeting that the benefit lectures by Mrs. Martin Johnson on the "Jungle Depths of Borneo" would take place in Constitution Hall May 28 at 3:30 p. m. and at 8:15 p. m.

The chairman added that the object of the benefit performances was not only to give the public in Washington an opportunity to take part in contributing toward the costs of the city-wide survey, but also to acqaint all public-spirited citizens of the importance of the work.

"If we are going to reduce the number of juvenile criminals that we now have in Washington," said Mrs. Meyer, "and if we are going to do our duty toward delinquent and dependent children, we must have the public behind us, and this can only be achieved through constant publicity of a dignified and factual sort."

Dale, '36 Nobel Prize Winner, Reveals Why Brow Gets Wet

The intriguing behavior of acetyl choline, a chemical manufactured by the human body and which makes the hands and brow break out in a sweat when you are frightened, was described here last night by Sir Henry Dale.

Nobel Prize winner in 1936 and one of Great Britain's foremost physiologists, Sir Henry addressed the Washington Academy of Medicine on his findings in the study of nerve impulses and how they are influenced by the chemistry of the blood.

Its presence known for decades, much still remains to be learned about acetyl choline, the distinguished Englishman declared. It is believed to be stored at the end of nerve cells, its duty to stimulate the ganglia cells of the involuntary nervous system.

A ruddy-complexioned Londoner who was knighted by the late King George V in 1932, Sir Henry's visit to Washington yesterday was in the nature of a reunion with Dr. Carl Voegtlin, chief of the pharmacology division of the National Institute of Health. They served together on the permanent commission for biological standardization of the League of Nations, and have been associated with each other at various times in bio-chemical research.

In more than 30 years as a laboratory scientist, Sir Henry has made numerous contributions to the understanding of antiphylactic shock and the potency of serums and hormones. A visiting lecturer at Johns Hopkins University in 1919, he delivered an address there last Monday. Tomorrow he will be heard by the New York Academy of Medicine.

Sir Henry is director of the National Institute for Medical Research at Hampstead, England, which corresponds to the National Institute of Health of the United States Public Health Service.

Petworth Citizens Back Abattoir Ban

A resolution approving the King bill which is aimed at the Gobel abattoir project was adopted last night by the Petworth Citizens Association which met last night at the Petworth School. The association took in 35 new members, bringing its roll to 1,203.

A resolution against daylight-saving time was offered but was defeated. A report from the legislative committee was received. This report favored four bills now before Congress—the measure to increase the amount of grand larceny from $35 to $75; the bill which makes use of slugs in pay phones a criminal offense; the measure to ban Government workers from operating taxicabs during off hours, and the bill for regulation of real estate brokers. The committee recommended adverse action on a bill which would permit District judges to retire after 12 years.

Police Decorated For Valor on Duty

The District of Columbia's three bravest policemen were decorated for heroism by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday at the "Police Day" Optimist Club luncheon, held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, cited Detective Earl L. Baker as recipient of the gold medal for his fearless performance in connection with a holdup at the Blue Bell lunchroom, 2335 Bladensburg road northeast, October 13, 1935. Baker, shortly after this excellent work, was elevated to the rank of detective sergeant.

Private Robert Talbert, who disarmed a desperate criminal, was awarded the silver medal, and William P. Doran was awarded the bronze medal for heroism in connection with the arrest of three men January 23, 1936, near Georgia ave-

Faulkner Is Named Civic Group President

The election of officers, the only formal action taken during the meeting, followed a speech by Mrs. Grace Putnam, vice president of the Consumers League, who outlined the function of the association.

New Adult T.B. Hospital to Be Accepted Today

The newly completed Adult Tuberculosis Hospital at Glenn Dale, Md., will be formally accepted for the District today by the Commissioners.

Their acceptance is expected to revive the controversy over future use of the old Tuberculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest from which 228 patients will be transferred when the interior of the new building is finished in about two months.

Three agencies—the Board of Public Welfare, the Playgrounds Department and the Board of Education—have asked the Commissioners for use of the building.

Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, said yesterday that no decision had yet been made but that one was likely in the near future.

The Board of Public Welfare wants the building to be converted into an obstetrical annex to Gallinger Hospital. It argues that this would delay building an obstetrical unit as an addition to Gallinger.

The Playground Department has proposed that the land on which the building stands be put into use as a recreation center.

Senators to Hear Farmers Today In Abattoir Fight

Having made an inspection trip to the Benning road site where the Adolf Gobel Co., proposes to build a modern abattoir, the McCarran sub-committee will resume hearings this afternoon on the King bill to regulate "nuisance industries."

A group of Maryland farmers sponsored by Senator Millard E. Tydings, a member of the sub-committee, will be heard today. They are expected to testify against the bill, which would prevent execution of the Gobel firm's plans.

Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, yesterday reiterated his support of the measure and asked:

"Why is Senator Tydings proposing that we do something here that isn't allowed in his own City of Baltimore?"

Reliefer With Car, Big Family Fined For Driving Drunk

Accused of driving while intoxicated, Douglas Robinson, colored, 722 Sixth street northwest, pleaded for leniency before Judge Walter J. Casey in Traffic Court yesterday, asserting he was sick, dependent upon relief aid and had a wife and four children.

"Whose car were you driving?" asked Judge Casey.

"Mine," said Robinson.

"When did you get it?"

"About a year ago."

"How long have you been on relief?"

"Near onto two years."

"One hundred dollars or 60 days—I don't think your family will be any worse off," said Judge Casey.

Policeman Hurt In Attempting to Arrest Motorist

Traffic Policeman Horace W. Carmichael, 28, suffered two fractured ribs yesterday while attempting to arrest a motorist for alleged speeding.

According to police reports, the policeman stopped Joseph A. Turano, 35, 900 block of Virginia avenue southeast, near Eighth and H streets northwest.

After charging Turano with speeding and failing to show an operator's permit, the policeman returned to duty. A short time later he complained of pains and a medical examination revealed two broken ribs.

Meanwhile the operator permits of the following persons were suspended: Bernardine Bronionie, 5405 Second street northwest, for 30 days for speeding; Frederick Cadigan, 4908 First street northwest, 30 days suspension; for speeding; William Carrol, 1329 Belmont street northwest, for reckless driving; Marvin Courtney, 3035 Douglas street northeast, 30 days, for speeding; Edward Evans, 2143 L street northeast, 30 days, for speeding; Claude Gantt, 2040 F street northwest, 30 days, for speeding; James Johnson, 1129 Sixth street northwest, 30 days, for speeding; Raymond Royston, of 3904 Northampton street northwest, 30 days, for speeding; Burwyne Porter, Baltimore, 30 days, for speeding; Edward Roberts, Seat Pleasant, Md., 30 days, for speeding.

Permits of the following persons were revoked: Edward Evans, 2143 L street northwest, for speeding; Walter Hollohan, Chevy Chase, Md., for excessive speeding; Robert Myers, of Waynesboro, Pa., for excessive speeding; Wilber Newton, for excessive speeding.

Crime Drive Planned by D. C. Police

'Big Shots,' Petty Thugs Get Warning to Leave City.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Plans for a general cleanup of Washington crime conditions will be mapped this week at a special meeting of police officials to be called by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, it was learned last night.

In line with his recent ultimatum—warning petty racketeers, hoodlums and panhandlers to leave the city or face arrest—Maj. Brown will summon all precinct commanders, it was rported, to discuss methods of attacking the problem.

Apparently convinced that a major portion of the city's transient criminal element failed to heed his first warning, the police chief said he was prepared to "tighten up a bit" and drive small-time criminals "back to where they came from."

But at the same time, Maj. Brown pointed out, the general roundup will not be confined to minor criminals. So-called "big-time" racketeers will be included in plans to rid the city of undesirables.

Precinct commanders, said Maj. Brown, will be ordered to check their districts in an effort to learn how many known criminals "moved on" after the first warning.

"We are ready for action," said the police superintendent. "Our main purpose is to rid Washington of petty crime and send those involved back to wherever they came from. This minor crime element is composed principally of hoodlum and thugs who come here to beg and thieve during their transient wanderings around the country."

It is expected that results of Maj. Brown's meeting with his commanding officers will bring wholesale arrests on vagrancy charges. This will permit the courts to order the offenders out of town.

In its first annual report, the Washington Criminal Justice Association revealed that housebreaking and thievery led all types of criminal offenses last year. Larceny and street robberies ranked second and third, respectively.

Fire Damages House on Eve Of Moving Day

Thomas House Blazes as Family Prepares to Move in.

C. S. Thomas, his wife and their four children were to have moved into their new ten-room house at 911 Rittenhouse street northwest early this morning, but now they cannot.

A two-alarm fire yesterday at noon did an estimated $3,000 damage to their new home.

The fire, believed to have been caused by trash fire sparks, set the newly laid shingles ablaze. One side of the sloping roof was destroyed before firemen could get the blaze under control.

The house was the former home of George Goodacre, the restaurant man, and recently had been remodeled. The house formerly had faced Georgia avenue.

Thomas, who owns a sandwich shop on Georgia avenue, was glad he had not moved into the house earlier this week as he had originally contemplated.

"My children would have been in schoool at the time," he said, "but I would have been fast asleep since I work at night in my shop.

'Widow' 37 Years, Wife Asks Divorce

The gray eyes of Mrs. Minnie M. Baggett puckered into a smile yesterday when she told of taking the first steps toward breaking the tie that binds—but a tie that hasn't bound her for 37 years. Mrs. Baggett, 61, went into District Court to ask divorce from her husband, John J. Baggett, of Washington, from whom she has been separated since 1900.

"I just don't want my husband to gain possession of some property I've got," she said. "I've got some insurance, too. I want a decent burial."

Mrs. Baggett was married when she was 14. She petitioned the court, through her attorney, Jean M. Boardman.

"After long and mature consideration, I have come to the conclusion that there is now little or no hope of reconciliation. * * * Since 1900 I have supported myself as well as raised my children, with no assistance from the defendant, and I do not want any alimony now." She asked divorce on the grounds of desertion.

A Study in Grace and Beauty

Nadine and Girardo, a study in blonde and brunette grace and beauty, are on view this week at the Raleigh's Pall Mall room. Ray Benson and orchestra for your own dancing.

Mexican Official Honors U. S. Envoy

Mexico City, May 18 (U.P.).—U. S. Ambassador Josephus Daniels, whose appointment in March, 1933, was denounced by students and others here as an "insult" to Mexico, today was described as "the most human diplomat the United States ever sent to foreign lands."

Octavio Reyes Spindola, protocol chief of the foreign office, paid the compliment on the occasion of the Ambassador's seventy-fifth birthday. It was a tribute to the diplomat's success in overcoming prejudice against him because he was Secretary of the Navy when the United States occupied Vera Cruz in 1914.

Daniels plans to leave tomorrow to visit his home in Raleigh, N. C. He will stop at Dallas en route to make an address.

New Orchestra To Appear at Wardman Park

Jimmy Santmyer Follows Arthur Warren at Metronome Room.

By Chanticleer.

Jimmy Santmyer is to follow Arthur Warren and his orchestra at Wardman Park's Metronome Room beginning next week. Maestro Warren takes a mutually regretful leave from his many friends in Washington, but the music business is that way and beginning next week he'll be entertaining at the Lincoln Hotel in New York, following Isham Jones.

Before he leaves, however, he is doing a "history" of popular tunes since his arrival here four months ago. Tonight he plays "Pennies From Heaven" and "Stomping at the Savoy," for February; "Goodnight My Love" and "Moonlight and Shadows" for March; "Little Old Lady," "This Year's Kisses" and "On the Avenue" for April—and "Boo Hoo," "September in the Rain" and "You Can't Take That Away From Me" for this month.

They tell you at the Raleigh that Ray Benson, the personable young scoundrel, draws just the same sort of audience to the Pall Mall Room: personable people. Also on view are Nadine and Girardo, a much-above-the average dance team. Nadine, so blond, and the dusky Girardo.

First of the summer roofs to inkle about an opening is the Powhatan. No date has been set, but the weather is going to break definitely warm in just a matter of days. Watch for the opening and better plan reservations.

* * * *

Entertaining these days at the Mayfair: Jack Campbell and Leo Lisee, at the piano and with lively ditties (requests if you name them), and Lady Anex, who will tell your fortune most glibly and convincingly, and Otis Manning, with sleight-of-hand.

From all reports the opening at the Cork and Bottle, in the Commodore Hotel, was a very festive affair. Something like 50 cases of champagne were used in the special opening cocktails served. The many guests included celebrities from the town's music circles.

* * * *

Bert Granoff is a frequent visitor these evenings at the Madrillon. Bert, who knows a few things about bands and music, gets a big kick out of Johnnie Shaw's music.

Helen Green has come to the Ambassador's High Hat Room to vend a bit of nicotine and project a blues singing personality into the gay scene. Then on May 21 the Hi Hat has a surprise announcement—something new in the way of entertainment. Alterations are now under way which will increase the capacity of the room.

* * * *

Therrien is the man.

Not only is he the fair-haired boy at the Shoreham these days, but he is stopping the show regularly. That makes any handsome young tenor the fair-haired boy in anybody's dining room. He comes billed as Chicago's favorite tenor and reports are that Therrien pleased the President of these United States recently when he sang at Warm Springs. Also on deck, the Adagio Trio, Karre Le Baron.

* * * *

The Ida Thorne Girls are on view at the Lotus, charming young ladies of the ensemble, who background the specialties headed by Walter Long and the Lee Sisters, adagio acrobatic dancers; Felicia and Del Re, in ultra modern dance routines; Mickey O'Day, acrobatic specialist, and Frankie Day, fast taps; Bill Strickland and his orchestra for your dancing.

Dick Richards is your host at Boulevard Farms, and everything is hunky dory with Mr. Richards. The boss, Mrs. C. B. Montgomery, has just returned from an extended trip to Mexico and she is more than pleased with the way in which Washingtonians are now trooping out to her place. Cheers for Mr. Richards, sez I. Sunday dancing at the Farms now, in case you didn't know.

My spies report a new band is on the way to Cocoanut Grove. But we don't know who's. Also the management reports that the Grove is to be made into a little more intimate spot by partitioning off the far back section of the room.

* * * *

The Variety Parade at La Paree this week includes Rolando and Verditta. And they've been around a bit. They've been to the Glass Bucket Club in Jamaica, Cuba's Hotel Nationale, Montreal's Club Chez Maurice and the Cine Roma in New York. La Paree says unhesitatingly they are about the best ever seen on its floor. Also the Freeman Twins are back, with Randall and Banks for comedy.

Sen. Ashurst Calm Under Defeat in High Court Fight

Senator Henry F. Ashurst retained his famous poise yesterday when he lost his fight for the President's court plan in his Senate Judiciary Committee.

He distributed to reporters at conclusion of the committee meeting a "philosophical disquisition" which had been prepared in advance. It read:

"Moderation, forbearance and restraint are the virtues of victory whilst patience and fortitude are the virtues of disaster. Almost any American citizen easily endures and quickly forgets disaster but it requires charcter and noblesse oblige to eudure victory.

"I hope to endure victory with becoming humility.

"Destiny distributes triumphs and defeats with charming nonchalance. Whether she awards victory or prescribes a defeat is unimportant to the individual, but it is of very great importance how the individual receives and carries that which destiny distributes to him."

On the Air Today

The promoter of the Braddock-Louis bout in Chicago in June isn't fooling around about the broadcast question. Sometimes, you will remember, the fight promoter decides to hold the announcement of a broadcast until the very last minute in order to help the gate. Mike Jacobs has elected to broadcast his heavyweight scrap and the announcement already is out.

The auto manufacturer who has gone in for big boxing exhibitions in the past again will sponsor the match. It will be exclusive over N. B. C. networks, expected to be the largest chain of stations ever used for a world heavyweight championship fight. Probably 125 stations.

Time is June 22, approximately 10 p. m.

Tour of the White House—Mrs. Roosevelt takes listeners on a mythical tour of the upper floors of the White House, WMAL, at 6:15.

Oswald—Introduces a beauty contest into the calm of Ken Murray's program, WJSV, at 7:30.

Concerto Grosso—Ernest Bloch's modern composition in the eighteenth century form is featured in N. B. C. String Symphony's hour, WMAL, at 8. Joseph Hontix at the piano.

Lily Pons—Sings the "Toreador" variations of Mozart, WJSV, at 8. Andre Kostelanetz and orchestra feature Raymond Scott's "Power House."

* * * *

Here and there: WJSV is feeding two Washington programs these evenings to the Columbia network's Dixie chain of stations. Dave McWilliams and his orchestra, from Glen Echo, are sent southward Tuesday evenings at 9:30 and Vincente del Garza follows at 9:45 . . . Arch McDonald has joined the local magician's society and is reported spending all his spare time amazing and amusing his friends with his prestidigitations . . . Harry Salter and his sweep music is scheduled for the "Hit Parade" for seven weeks starting in June . . . Ted Weems is to substitute for Horace Heidt when the later goes on vacation next week and the week following.

* * * *

More here and there: Jack Oakie and his troupe leave the air for the summer after next week's show. Benny Goodman and the orchestra may be retained for a half hour show, however, to replace the present full hour "College" . . . Latest West Coast radio rumor has Ted Healy and Henry Armetta (the Italian dialect artist) heading a new variety show, with Phil Ohman's orchestra and Patsy Kelly . . . Johnny Davis, the "scat singer" with Fred Waring's orchestra, has quit for film work. He has been signed by Warner Brothers . . . Shep Fields and his orchestra will appear in a specialty number in the "Big Broadcast of 1938."

* * * *

Radio follows the other branches of show business in helping a brother in distress. Joe Sullivan, swing pianist, is very ill in New York. Out on the West Coast a benefit is being prepared under Bing Crosby's direction. Will there be bands for the customers who attend? Just look—Georgie Stoll, Victor Young, Harry Owens, Ted Flo Rito and Glen Gray. J. H. H.

Farm Leaders Insist New Plan Will Be Upheld

Base View on Wagner Act Ruling of Interstate Commerce.

By Russell Smith.

Repudiating suggestions their new agriculture adjustment bill is linked with the President's court plan, organized farmer representatives last night insisted the bill would be upheld by the Supreme Court as it is now constituted.

They rely on the Wagner act decision's interpretation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution and on drafting of the bill to avoid criticisms expressed by the court when it invalidated the original AAA.

These views were expressed yesterday before the agriculture committees of House and Senate and amplified later by backers of the bill.

Compulsory Control Hit.

Compulsory production control as provided in the bill drew most of the fire on constitutionality, as it has in other proposals for dealing with the farm problem.

"In proposing to force farmers to take one of three courses to prevent surpluses, have you ever given thought to what the court might do about it?" Senator George W. Norris (Independent Republican), of Nebraska, asked Earl C. Smith, Illinois farm leader, at the afternoon Senate hearing.

"We have given the question . . . very serious thought, and believe the penalty provision would stand a court test on the ground that excess supplies unquestionably flow into interstate commerce," Smith replied.

On this question, Frederic P. Lee, local attorney, told the House Committee the bill is drawn on the assumption marketing of any part of a crop affects interstate commerce, but that the bill attempts regulation only on such commodities as are involved in traffic across State lines.

Choice of Loan, Penalty.

When Norris questioned him, Smith was explaining the farmer, under the bill, would be given choice of a government loan to hold excess supplies off the market and a contract to reduce acreage the following year, or the privilege of unrestricted marketing upon payment of a penalty.

Later, advocates of the bill explained that not only do they believe the Wagner act rulings broaden interstate commerce interpretation sufficiently to justify this bill, but that it avoids criticisms embodied in the Hoosac Mills (AAA) decision.

These objections centered about undue delegation by Congress of powers and use of the taxing power, in the processing taxes, to exert Federal control in an essentially local matter.

Other criticisms of the bill were voiced at the hearing by Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, and Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington. Smith feared a repetition of the Federal Farm Board disaster and Schwellenbach objected to the bill's flexible tariff proviso as likely to upset "present reciprocal tariffs."

12 Junior Clubs Plan Concert for Saturday

A program of music by American composers will be given by members of 12 junior clubs, affiliated with the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs, Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in the headquarters of the League of American Pen Women, Hotel Grafton. The concert has been arranged by Gertrude Lyons, State junior counselor, and is open to the public without charge.

Elmo Russ to Appear At Arts Club Friday

Elmo Russ, the only American composer writing songs exclusively for the lyrics of contemporary American poets, will be presented by Inez Sheldon Tyler in a program of his own compositions at the Arts Club of Washington Friday evening.

The program includes settings of poems by five Washington poets: "New Scotland Town" by Pepita Crounse; "Song After Rain" by Edith Mirick; "Mammy's Lullaby" by Mary N. S. Whiteley; "God's Troubadour" by Inez Sheldon Tyler, and "Wild Plum" by Benjamin Musser.

Other poets represented are: Babette Deutsch ("Pausa"), Edna St. Vincent Millay ("Road to Avrill"), John Hall Wheelock ("A Song from Heaven"), Hervey Allen ("South-ward Ho!"), Langston Hughes ("Cross"), Willa Cather ("Spanish Johnny"), Elizabeth Coatsworth ("A Lady Comes to an Inn"), Jeannette Slocum Edwards ("Night"), Theodore Dreiser ("Love"), Eda Lou Walton ("African Moon Song"), and Karl Wilson Baker ("Captive Song").

Rev. Black Praises Comic

"Permit me to congratulate you on the publication of the new comic strip, Roy Powers, Eagle Scout," said the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, Scoutmaster of Troop 231, Rockville, Md., in a recent letter to The Washington Post. The Rev. Mr. Black is pastor of Rockville Christian Church. His letter continues: "This new feature should be of great interest to adult and youth alike. It offers the type of thought leadership of which we have all too little in these busy days. Our sincere best wishes to Roy Powers, Eagle Scout, for a most happy and successful future."

First Theater Council Conclave Will Be Addressed By Distinguished Representatives of Living Drama

Marc Connelly, Sidney Howard, Morris Gest, Frank Gilmore and Others Are Among Those Who Will Present Case of Theater to the World; Theater Guild Announces Plans; Notes of the Theater.

THE program for the American Theater Council's convention, to be held in the Hotel Astor, New York, from May 24 to 27, has been completed.

The convention will open its deliberations at 12:30 on Monday, with an address of welcome from Helen Hayes and five-minute speeches by Frank Gillmore, president of the Actors Equity Association; Sidney Howard, noted playwright, president of the Dramatists' Guild; Marcus Heiman, president of the League of New York Theaters, and James J. Brennan, vice president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and president of Theatrical Protective Union, No. 1.

BELL.

The first discussion session will take place on the same day at 2:30. The subject will be "The Producer and the Theater" and the chairman will be Brock Pemberton. Among the speakers at this session will be Worthington Miner, who will devote himself to the problems of the director, and Morris Gest, who will present a plan for a theatrical festival in 1938.

The second general session, which will take place on Tuesday morning at 10:30, will be on "The Dramatist and the Theater." The chairman, on this occasion, will be Sidney Howard and the speakers will be Marc Connelly, author of "The Green Pastures;" Arthur Kober, Paul Green, distinguished Southern playwright; Phillip Dunning, Barrett H. Clark and others.

The subjects and speakers at later sessions will be announced in due course. They may include Andrew J. Kelley, of the Washington Times, and your present reporter, both of whom have been invited to participate in the proceedings as added starters.

More of this later, I am afraid.

Audrey Sieber, mistress of ceremonies at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for, lo, these many years, as the man said, has returned to her routine duties after a delightful vacation with the surgeons and trained nurses who preside over appendicitis cases. Audrey resumed her official duties on Monday and was enthusiastically greeted by her many admirers out front who have been anxiously awaiting her return to the rostrum to announce the Earle's stage acts. It is nice to have her back.

The Theater Guild of New York announces the opening dates for the first two productions of its twentieth subscription season in Manhattan. The 1937-38 season will open on October 4 with "To Quito and Back," a new play by Ben Hecht, which will go into rehearsal on August 23 and will have a preliminary showing in Boston, beginning September 20.

The second production will be Gaston Baty's Paris hit, "Madame Bovary," adapted to the English stage and directed by Benn W. Levy, with Constance Cummings, Mrs. Benn Levy, in the title role. The tryout cities for "Madame Bovary" will be Washington and Pittsburgh, beginning October 4, but it seems not to have been decided as yet which of the two cities will see the play first. Washington, I hope.

Beginning today, the RKO-Keith Theater, in Washington, will have on its screen complete newsreel pictures of the Coronation of George VI in London. The entire Pathe News is devoted to this single subject. The pictures were made under the personal supervision of Jack Connolly, former Washington representative of the Will H. Hays office in the National Capital, now general manager of Pathe News. Jack made a special trip to London for the express purpose of making sure that these pictures would be right. From years of friendship with him I have come to know that Jack makes very few mistakes.

Mr. Arnold B. Fort, of 812 Twentieth street northwest, in a letter that is much too long for complete reproduction here, is keenly annoyed because this department chooses to be constructive rather than destructive.

It is Mr. Fort's contention—or seems to be—that when a play or a picture is 85 per cent excellent and 15 per cent deficient in those elements that make for perfect dramaturgy that the emphasis should be laid on the 15 per cent and not the 85. This department has never hesitated to condemn those things on stage or screen which it deems unworthy. What it has consistently refused to do is offend, hurt proud spirits and set itself up as the sole arbiter in all the world of what a prospective patron of the theater may or may not feel inclined to see.

The intent of this writer is to make it possible for the reader—if any—to determine for himself whether he wishes to expend the price of admission for the given entertainment. This is a policy that has been set forth in these columns many times before.

It is one, furthermore, that will be adhered to in the interest of the greatest good to the greatest number, as the saying goes.

Suggestions still continue to come in as to the matter of casting "Gone With the Wind." Miss Eva L. Sampson, of Mount Wilson, Md., writes to make known her choice for the role of Rhett Butler and it seems not to be a bad one. It is her idea that the ideal choice for the part would be Ralf Harolde. Ralph Harolde, in case you do not immediately recall him, is a sinister young fellow with a fine facility for snarling, and all of the other attributes of a "sneering, devilish and fascinating smoothie," as Miss Sampson characterizes him. It is her thought that Mr. Harolde—and I always have mistrusted the authenticity of that name—is not quite well enough known to make the grade, and she may be right. At least, the suggestion has more than the usual basis of sound thinking to stand on—and, as I have said many times before, never use a preposition to end a sentence with!

The Fourth Annual Show Festival of the Hedgerow Theater will run from July 19 to August 14 at the home playhouse of the repertory company in Moylan-Rose Valley, Pa.

Among the works of George Bernard Shaw the following are scheduled for presentation: "Arms and the Man," "Candida," "You Can Never Tell," "The Devil's Disciple," "Getting Married," "Misalliance," "Androcles and the Lion," "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets," "Heartbreak House" and "Saint Joan."

Shaw this year will be 81 years of age. His anniversary will be celebrated by the production at Hedgerow of "Too True to Be Good," the play that Beatrice Lillie didn't understand until she had played in it for weeks—an then didn't!

Survival-of-the-Fittest Note.

Yesterday's ...er was Eddie Selzer, from the Burbank studios of the Warners, who was on that nerve-wracking "Forty-Second Street Special" five years ago. How he ever lasted this long I shall never know. Must be an iron man. But there he is.

Final Bills Submitted For Shenandoah Park

Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, said yesterday bills introduced by himself and Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, constitute the final step in establishment of the Shenandoah National Park.

The bills direct the Secretary of the Interior to give notice to Virginia that the United States assumes police jurisdiction over lands lying in the park area.

The bills were submitted to Attorney General A. P. Staples, of Virginia, and approved by him.

From Cockpit to Screen Stardom

This smiling young man is John Trent, plucked from the driver's seat of a transcontinental airplane by B. P. Schulberg, motion picture producer, who cannily discerned that Mr. Trent had the makings of a movie hero in his features and bearing. Mr. Trent, therefore, comes to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater on Friday in Paramount's production of "Doctor's Diary," in which he achieves a stellar role.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, May 18.—Friends of Jobyna and Richard Arlen are still laughing over a priceless trick Joby pulled on Dick a short while back. It seems that he had decided he was in need of rest, so he leased a house at Palm Springs. The morning he was to leave for the resort, Mrs. Arlen said she had things to do, and would join him in a few days.

STEWART.

But the instant Dick's car was out of sight, Joby bundled Ricky (the Arlen youngster) and two household servants into the second family machine and raced for the desert by a short cut. When Dick rolled up to the front of his newly leased home after a leisurely drive, he blinked with amazement. Sam, the family chauffeur, was placidly watering the lawn.

Slightly dazed, Dick put his machine in the garage and entered the house through the kitchen door. Surprise number two: Rose, the Arlen cook, was preparing dinner, just as if she had been there for years. Walking into the living room, Dick's jaw dropped to his fourth vest button when he found Ricky playing on the floor with his mother.

Describing the episode on his return from the Springs, Arlen told me that at sight of Joby and Ricky exactly as he had left them in Hollywood, the room began to whirl in front of his eyes. "No kidding," Dick said, "I thought I had delirium tremens."

Romantic young ladies who have written Jimmy Stewart such sophisticated fan letters may change their tune after reading this. It happened the other night out at Henry Fonda's house. After dinner, Hank sat down to read a few pages from "Wizard of Oz" to his newly acquired step-daughter. Stewart stretched full length on a sofa, quiet as a mouse as Fonda's well-modulated voice unfolded the famous kid story.

After a few pages, Henry noticed that the little girl had fallen asleep. He stopped reading and rose with the child in his arms, preparing to take her to bed. Suddenly Stewart's eyes popped open. "Hey!" he exclaimed petulantly, "What's the idea of stopping? Read a couple more chapters—it was just gettin' good."

MOVIE BULLS. Decision of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks that a costaring picture would coin millions. They made "Taming of the Shrew"—and the odor stills lingers (1929).

M-G.-M's failure to take up Deanna Durbin's option at $100 a week. Six months after Deanna became a million-dollar investment for another studio (1936).

A Hollywood tailor's refusal to accept 10 per cent of Rudolph Vanentino's future earnings (in lieu of cash) for a dress suit which Rudy, then an extra, needed for his first movie hit (1919).

Casting John Gilbert as Romeo in an early talkie, simply because John had been a "great lover" in silent movies. His squeaky voice was so unfit, audiences howled him out of pictures (1929).

Janet Gaynor's hasty marriage to Lydell Peck after a spat with Charles Farrell. The union lasted only long enough to teach Janet the folly of hot-headed impulsiveness (1919).

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Showing a Weak Hand.

"My Dear Mrs. Culbertson: I had been taught that only after an opening bid of one notrump could a player 'sign off' by making a minimum bid and rebid in a long but weak suit. But in the recent World Bridge Olympic I was told that West in Hand No. 7 signed off after an opening suit bid. Is this correct?

"Yours truly, V. M. C."

Not entirely. But I can resolve the conflict more easily by presenting the hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 7 4 3 ♡ J 6 2 ◇ 10 9 5 ♣ A K
♠ K 9 5 ♡ 8 ◇ 6 3 ♣ Q J 9 7 5 3 2	North West East South	♠ Q 10 6 ♡ A K 10 5 ◇ K Q J 2 ♣ 10 8
	♠ A 2 ♡ Q 9 7 4 3 ◇ A 8 7 4 ♣ 6 4

The bidding recommended by the Olympic committee was:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	3 ♣	Pass	Pass
Pass

West's bidding, while not strictly constituting a sign-off, should warn East to leave well enough alone. He should take his cue not so much from what West bid as what he failed to bid.

Give West a fairly good club suit—K Q J x x x x, for example—and he can have no high card in spades. For with so strong a holding in the black suits he would have bid two or there notrump rather than three clubs.

The corollary is equally true: If West has a high spade, his club suit must be weak. And not even much hope can be held out for a game at a suit. With support for hearts or diamonds West would have raised instead of returning to clubs. And with any chance for game at clubs, he would have tried a jump to four clubs over two diamonds.

Thus, East can drive a very accurate picture of West's hand and naturally passes, since he can think of no better contract. But with a stronger hand, East might disregard the warning and bid three notrump. For example: Spades, A. J; hearts, A. J, 9, 5; diamonds, K, Q, 10, 2; clubs, A, 10, 8.

As those who played in the Olympic remember, there was very little to the play of this hand (although most Olympic hands are gems in that respect). North's best lead was a low spade, South taking his Ace and returning the suit. Faced with the certain loss of the high trumps and the diamond Ace, West had to provide against a third-round spade ruff. Therefore, his correct play was to cash the top heart so as to discard the King of spades before drawing trumps. The rest of the hand was simple.

Jewish Drive Workers Submit Reports Tonight

With their $80,000 goal in sight, several hundred volunteer workers in the United Jewish Appeal will meet tonight at the Jewish Community Center to make final reports. Approximately $70,000 was collected up to Sunday.

Drive leaders are disappointed over the failure of teams to amass a greater number of contributors this year. Less than 1,700 donations have been received to date. Isidore Hershfield, co-chairman of the appeal, said chairman will consider the campaign a failure unless at least 2,500 individual donations are received.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Mother Aspires to Be Journalist; Wonders if Correspondence Course Will Aid Her.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you help me? I am 21, have been married five years to a wonderful husband and have two sweet girls. But I'm just waking up to the fact that I'm young. There must be something more for me in this game of life than a grandstand seat on the side lines of my children's lives. Journalism has always appealed to me more than anything else.

• • • •

What do you think of correspondence courses in writing? And where could I find literature on technique, syndicates and how to sell my work? Do you think, judging from this letter, that I may some day learn to be a writer? What would you do in my place? Sincerely, ELIZABETH.

• • • •

DEAR ELIZABETH: If you have a real writing talent, great force of character and driving ambition, I have no doubt you could profit immeasurably by a correspondence course of study in journalism. I am told it is a searching test of the student's capacity for self-disciplined effort. Immovable deadlines have to be met, which means the student has to produce by perspiration what inspiration doesn't supply him. Columbia University, New York City, has one of the largest correspondence schools—as well as one of the most distinguished schools of journalism—in the country, so why not inquire into what it has to offer you? Literature pertaining to writing technique would be included in the course, and if and when you show some journalistic promise, your mentors will advise you how to place your writings for publication.

• • • •

Your letter indicates a better-than-average facility for expressing yourself with an economy of words, and I dare say you could become a writer if you urgently want to. It may interest you to know how Mary Heaton Vorse, well-known author and free-lance writer for magazines and newspapers, defines the art of writing. "The art of writing," she is quoted as saying, "is the art of applying the seat of the pants to the seat of the chair." M. H.

Is Beau Permissible.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 23 years old, have been married, have a little girl and am separated from my husband but not divorced. He no longer cares for me and doesn't treat me right. I have met another young man whom I believe would be very nice to me. Shall I keep company with him or wait a while? I want to do the right thing for my baby's sake. I work and give her what I can, since her father does nothing for her. I can never live with him again. Please tell me what to do, so that I won't make a second mistake and bring additional unhappiness on myself and the child. UNDECIDED.

• • • •

DEAR UNDECIDED: The wife who is separated from her husband but not divorced is unhappily situated so far as freedom of social actions is concerned, particularly when there is a child whose custody must one day be awarded to one or the other parent. If you were to start having beaux, your husband, if he chose to be disagreeable, might attempt to present you in an unfavorable light—as a woman unfit to have the custody of her child—when divorce proceedings are instituted.

• • • •

However, if you feel that he would not care to saddle himself with full moral, social and financial responsibility for the child, purely as a gesture of revenge against you; and if you are sure that his family would refrain from trouble-making interferences, you might take a chance on cultivating the friendship of the other man.

• • • •

After all, it is rather unthinkable that a 23-year-old girl should be denied normal, wholesome social contacts with congenial persons only because she lacks funds to obtain a divorce from a worthless, absentee husband. If you decide to accept the young man's friendship, observe the greatest discretion in your comings and goings. Keep respectable hours, don't entertain him in your home unless others are present and see that he meets the approval of your family and other friends. M. H.

Tomorrow's Problem.

After three years' courtship, boy, 18, is told by girl, 17, that she loves another man. Sleepless, hysterical, "crazily in love," unable to work, the rejected suitor asks "how to go on?" His problem will be considered here tomorrow.

Girl Graduate's Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Before entering college, I went with a boy for three years. He did not want me to go to college and consequently we quarreled when I did. After I had entered, I wrote telling him about college life but he never replied. But I still like him and am almost certain that he doesn't go with any other girl. I would like to send him one of our formal, printed invitations to the graduation exercises. But I am wondering if I should enclose, as well, a little informal note to make it seem more personal. If I should, can you give me some idea what to say? GIRL GRADUATE.

• • • •

DEAR GIRL GRADUATE: If you have had no correspondence or other social contact with the boy over a period of years, he merits no more than a formal invitation. But if your heart dictates otherwise, why not scribble an informal message on the calling card customarily enclosed? It should be brief. You might say, "I do hope you can come, Jane," with the "do" underscored. Or, "Surely you've forgiven me by now. Come to my graduation and let's bury the hatchet, Jane." Or, "Sometimes I think you were right—that I shouldn't have come. But anyway, I'm about to graduate now and would love to have you in on the finish, Jane." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's Woman's Page.

Active and Spectator Sports Shoes

The vogue for linen is reflected in the tailored shoes at the right, made of natural-colored linen with detachable brown leather kiltie tongues. They have built-up leather heels and special composition soles that recommend them for either active or spectator sports. White buckskin with either tan or black calf quarters and backs fashions the smart oxfords below, with built-up leather heels; appropriate to accompany town or country clothes, and tailored suits of linen or cotton. Flexible soles of special composition keep out dampness and provide firm footing on the fairway for golf enthusiasts. Kiltie tongues could be added if desired, for spectator sports wear. You can match your other accessories to your shoes this summer, since color combinations as well as materials have been harmonized by designers.

Jellied Foods Play Varied Role In Spring and Summer Dishes

Mrs. L. W. Burton's Recipe for Peppermint Pudding Wins Her First Place in The Post's Weekly Contest.

By Rebekah Blake.

JELLIED FOODS are many. And they are not limited to only one course in the menu for gelatin and jello dishes include consomme, meat loaf, fish, egg dishes, cheese dishes, salads, vegetable courses, puddings, pies, cakes and ice creams. Their versatility and freshness makes them especially appropriate for spring and summer menus.

Mrs. L. W. Burton, 905 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., won the first prize, $3, in The Post recipe contest last week. He recipe was for peppermint pudding.

The second prize, $2, was won by Mrs. Leonora Waite, 201 Colesville road, University Park, Md., for her recipe for apricot cups. Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick, Md., won the third prize, $1, for her recipe for favorite crabmeat mold, and Miss Nellie MacFarlane, 216 Spruce avenue, Takoma Park, Md., received the fourth prize, $1, for her recipe for layer cake salad. The fifth prize, also $1, was won by Mrs. G. E. White, 2109 F street northwest, for her recipe for caramel pecan chiffon pie.

Here is Mrs. Burton's recipe:

Peppermint Pudding.

¼ pound peppermint stick candy
2 cups whipping cream
1½ teaspoons gelatin in 1 tablespoon cold water
18 lady fingers.

Crush the candy and put in double boiler with ½ cup of the cream. Melt over hot water and add soaked gelatin. Set aside to cool and add to whipped cream. Line a mold with lady fingers, then cover them with a thick layer of this mixture, another layer of lady fingers and more cream mixture until mold is full. Top with the cream mixture. Set in refrigerator several hours. Slice and serve. Garnish with strips of candied grapefruit peel, if desired.

Mrs. Waite's recipe:

Apricot Cups.

Moisten cream cheese with mayonnaise, add broken nut meats, stuff halves of canned apricots with the cheese mixture, and press two halves together. Place in teacups or individual molds.

Dissolve a package of lemon gelatin in two cups of water and pour over apricots. Chill until gelatin is firm. Serve on lettuce, with cream salad-dressing.

Here is Mrs. Rhoads' recipe:

Favorite Crabmeat Mold.

1 tablespoon plain gelatin
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup mayonnaise
1 cup flaked crabmeat
½ cup minced celery
2 tablespoons minced parsley
½ cup chopped cucumber
2 tablespoons minced, stuffed olives
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Few grains Cayenne
Lettuce
Watercress

Soften the gelain in the cold water; melt over steam, and add to the mayonnaise. Combine with the remaining ingredients; and transfer to a ring mold rinsed with cold water. Chill in the refrigerator until firm; unmold; and fill the center with lettuce hearts and sprigs of cress. Garnish with cut lemon dusted with paprika.

Miss MacFarlane's recipe:

Layer Cake Salad.

Cucumber layer:
1½ cups hot water
1 tablespoon lime gelatin
½ cup chopped cucumber, drained
¼ cup ground green pepper
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
Carrot layer:
1½ cups hot water
1 tablespoon lemon gelatin
½ cup grated carrot
½ cup shredded pineapple
1 teaspoon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
Tomato layer:
1½ cups tomato juice
1 tablespoon wine gelatin
¼ cup chopped pimiento
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt and dash of paprika.

For each layer, blend ingredients with softened gelatin. In a wet mold, pour cucumber layer. Chill till firm. Spread on half filling. Chill. Pour on carrot layer, chill, spread remaining filling. Chill. Pour on tomato layer. Chill. Unmold and frost with mayonnaise into which a tablespoon of gelatin has been beaten. Decorate with a design of slices of stuffed olives.

Filling.

Combine
1 package cream cheese
1 teaspoon dissolved gelatin
2 teaspoons cream
Beat well.

Here is Mrs. White's recipe:

Caramel Pecan Chiffon Pie.

1 cup dark brown sugar
4 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup cold water
½ cup pecans, chopped and toasted
1 cup hot water
1-3 cup white sugar
¼ tablespoon granulated gelatin
1 9-inch baked pie shell

Cook brown sugar and hot water together for 5 minutes. Beat egg yolks, white sugar and salt together until thick and lemon colored. Add sirup slowly and gradually and cook mixture in double boiler until custard coats spoon. Add the gelatin which has been soaked in cold water for 5 minutes and stir until dissolved. Chill until partially set. Whip until fluffy and fold in ¼ cup pecans which have been chopped and then heated in the oven. Whip the egg whites until stiff and fold into the custard mixture. Pour into a 9-inch baked pie shell and sprinkle with the remaining pecans. Chill at least four hours.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Infection Prevention.

The domestic science teacher, nurse, Boy or Girl Scout, or house mother, is called upon to administer first aid frequently. In doing so, confidence is of great importance, and there is nothing that contributes more to confidence than acquiring simple methods. The first aid is not supposed to treat an injury for completely cure, but simply to prepare it for the doctor who will apply the final scientific arrangement.

The second thing that is demanded of first aid is that it shall do no harm.

Both of these things are summed up principally in the first thing that must always be considered, and that is the prevention of infection. Any open wound, cut, bruise or burn is liable to infection from the air, from contaminated dressings, and from finger touches. The germs, the staphylococcus and streptococcus, which cause skin infection in the great majority of cases, are everywhere in Nature, always ready to pounce into an open wound and begin to grow and do harm.

Never wash a wound. Never try to irrigate it. If the wound is already infected, pouring water over it simply spreads the infection around. If you haven't a sterile piece of gauze to put on the wound, don't put anything on it. Air is less dangerous than a contacting object. It is easy enough to make a sterile dressing by taking a handkerchief or a towel and putting it in boiling water for three minutes. After this is cooled off and been wrung out, put a surface which your hands have not touched against the wound and you have done all that can be done immediately.

In any wound that is at all deep or looks serious it is best not to try to use antiseptics, such as iodine or mercurochrome, but wait for the doctor to make his decision. If the edges of the wound are dirty and are to be wiped off, boiling water always should be used, as some of it is likely to seep into the wound.

Avoid court plaster and collodion, also surgeon's plaster or adhesive tape, except to hold a bandage from slipping out of place.

All other methods of first-aid treatment are secondary to this one of preventing infection. It is better to do nothing than to do something doubtful. If a doctor is available and can be reached within a half hour, it won't hurt to leave even a deep wound uncovered until he arrives.

If in a wound in which home first aid has been used exclusively and it has been decided it is not serious enough to call the doctor, infection develops in a day or two, it will be known by redness, pain, red streaks in the skin around the wound, or the presence of pus. Certainly under these circumstances medical advice should be sought.

Active Sports Shoes Cover Feet Entirely

The following article is one in a series on summer style trends by The Post's Fashion Editor who is surveying fashions at their sources in the merchandise markets.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, May 18.—With shoes and hats going decollete this summer, it is surprising to find that footwear for active sports has defied all trends and influences and appears in complete coverage for the feet. If you are the type who scorns open toes and bared heels, you also will be delighted to know that shoes to wear with your tailleurs and spectator sports outfits, may be had in "complete" versions.

Another interesting feature about the summer shoes in the sturdy classification is that they are being fashioned of linens and heavy cottons, in smart solid color tones as well as bold stripes and gala prints. This idea is a clever adaptation of designers, who want to cater to the ensemble-mindedness of fastidious American women. Regardless of the informality of your costume, you can be a symphony in any color theme you choose this season and match your costume with shoes in the same kind of material.

The "Basic" Shoe.

Taking a cue from the popular basic dress, active and spectator sports shoes that may be transformed by the addition of kiltie tongues, contrasting leather bows and buckles, have made their appearances in numerous new versions. This makes the same pair of shoes equally adaptable to sports wear, and to accompany country clothes, and town outfits of the casual type. Every item of the modern wardrobe is now designed to be as versatile as possible—accessories being of paramount importance in this realm.

Since all shoes for summer have affected the higher heel trend, casual shoes, too, have followed suit. Flats are almost disappearing from the picture, according to shoe experts. Heels termed low are higher than they have been in past seasons. They have built-up heels, however, giving support to the foot as well as a smarter appearance. The high-riding influence in daytime and evening shoes is reflected in sports and spectator sports footwear.

Two-Color Footwear.

Two colors are considered smarter than monotone schemes for casual shoes. The combination of white with brown, black, navy and luggage tan, has taken precedence over the all-white shoe. This applies to leathers and fabrics alike. Oxfords lead in styling for footwear in this category. They may be conventional ties or may flaunt huge kiltie tongues.

Stockings to accompany these sturdy shoes should match in texture—sheer chiffons are not at all harmonious with the heavier type of footwear. Mesh stockings are as smart as they are practical; also, the walking type of sheer in the four-threaded or service classification. For smartest effect, deeper colors are better than light tints; for instance, deep sunburn shades and coppery tones.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 18.

THE popular-priced spring season at the dear old Metropolitan Opera has been booming along this year, introducing young and ambitious larks of both sexes to the sacred boards once trodden by Caruso, Eames and Melba. This brief stunt was introduced last year by Maestro Edward Johnson and has turned out to be a howling success—and I never pun.

ALICE HUGHES.

It gives the opera-lovers of the town a chance to hear the standard works for a modest fee, and it breaks into the op'ry large crowds of youngsters, among whom may be found the Flagstads of tomorrow. Several of last spring's crop were signed for the regular winter season, and this year's covey sounds pretty promising to the cupped ears of the critics.

One of the debutantes is pretty Lucy Monroe, only a few years ago a Broadway musical comedy triller and more recently a standard radio warbler. Lucy was turned loose in "La Boheme" a few nights ago and did nicely. Three other fresh-plucked sopranos are Margaret Daum, Nancy McCord and Helen Traubel, while Maria Matyas and Jennie Tourel are new mezzos.

What an adventure for these nice young people with their fresh young voices! It marks the culmination of years of patient study and ardent hope. Wouldn't you like to feel the thrill they experience as they step out on that historic stage for the first time, dressed in the trappings of opera which they've only known from the cheap seats? That must be, I should guess, the kick of a lifetime!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Don't come hanging around our beautiful Palisades, on the west bank of the Hudson, and think you can pick wild flowers to your heart's content! Oh, no! A big, hulking Boy Scout will get you and then read you a lecture on Conservation. This Scout patrol stopped no less than 109 people from picking posies last Sunday, which goes to show that New York wild flowers may be wild, but not wild enough. Honestly, the number of things you can't do around here is simply appalling!

• • • •

Noel Coward again staves off starvation. "Present Indicative," his snippy memoirs, now hit their fifth edition. Dear Null says he isn't going to do a tap of work for a whole year—and why in the heck should he? Everything the ex-Boy Wonder touches turn to royalties!

• • • •

Ely Culbertson's two-person card game has finally hit the stores here. He calls it Jo-Jotte, and I doubt if even Ely knows the reason.

• • • •

I've written a lot about our precious gourmets here—those fancy fussers over food and drink—and I'm glad to say they've just been shocked right out of their napkins! It was done by a new member of their society, Dr. A. S. W. Bosenbach, the famous bibliophile. At the latest gourmets' spell of food-worship, the doctor not only began his repast with a stiff hooker of whisky, but smoked all during the meal—both horrible heresies to the food-fetichists. Good for you, Doc! Next time, drink the wrong type of wine with your fish and watch half the membership drop dead!

• • • •

May be a bit late with this, but it's interesting to hear that our florists report the smallest Mother's Day business in years. They blame high prices, street vendors of flowers, and gifts of candy rather than posies.

• • • •

Well, our 14 burlesque theaters were closed with a faint thud—and I guess the boys and girls went far too far. It threw 4,000 people out of work—and I wonder what the little $25 a week chorus girls will do now? Poor little kids—it was a living, and jobs for little blonde dancers are anything but plentiful. Lots of bad goes with the good, always.

• • • •

How did you make out in National Baby Week—or didn't you know it was on? Anyway, it closed May 8, and I hope brought untold happiness to babies everywhere. One thing they pointed out to me was the Bye-Bye Bottle Warmer, which heats the milk without fire or electricity. My interest in this was academic, if any.

Beaus' Pictures Worn In Costume Jewelry

New York, (AP).—Anything from toy circus animals to your best beau's photograph may be worn this season in costume jewelry.

Some of the new crystal and sterling silver charms to be worn as a necklace are made to open so a young man's picture can be inserted.

One smart shop has an entire case of circus jewelry—miniature bears, giraffes, clowns and elephants in gay colored enamel trimmed with rhinestones—each piece a vivid note for a sports ensemble.

Sauce Dishes Feature Post's Recipe Contest

WHEN YOU SERVE an expensive steak or broiled chops without the proper sauce, something is missing. The sauce or dressing you use on your meat, salad or dessert may make the entire meal a success when it would otherwise be a failure.

If you have a pet recipe for dressing or sauce, whether it be for salad, meat, vegetable, fish, or dessert, enter it in The Post recipe contest and you may win one of the cash prizes which are: $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize, and $1 for each of the three additional awards.

You may have a receipe for newburg sauce, anchovy sauce, brown celery sauce, hollandaise, chutney, mock mushroom, tomato, orange and olive sauce, bacon or tartare sauce, pimiento or Spanish sauce or Russian or French dressing. Or for dessert, you may select a recipe for hard sauce, butter crunch or chocolate sauce, ginger or peach dressing, hot coffee sauce, lemon and pineapple sauce or peppermint syrup. Any one of these or many others may win a cash prize for you.

Write your recipe neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, in care of this paper, so she will receive it not later than Saturday noon. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on your recipe. Only one recipe may be submitted by each contestant.

Bankheads Are Honored At Reception

Marine Band Plays for Congressional Club's Guests at Affair.

Alabama Delegation and Others From South Are Present.

By Dudley Harmon.

SOUTHERN DRAWLS and Alabama songs played by the Marine Band marked the reception given last evening by the Congressional Club for the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Bankhead. The entire Alabama delegation among the Representatives was present, as this is the Speaker's home State, and many others from the South were there.

Last evening was the third time this season the Bankheads have been feted by the Congressional Club. Members gave a tea for their daughter, Tallulah, and later another in honor of the actress' stepmother. Last evening Mrs. Bankhead, who is tall and blonde, wore a white satin gown made with a halter neck and a fringed scarf. She had pinned an orchid at the neckline, and the gown had a fingertip length satin cape fringed at the hem, which Mrs. Bankhead discarded before taking her place in the receiving line.

An out-of-town guest, who had expected all Representatives to have gray beards, remarked on the many very young men in last evening's gathering. There was Representative James F. O'Connor, of Livingston, Mont., 26 years old, and the youngest member of Congress. He was accompanied by his wife, who wore a gown of white organdy made with puffed sleeves. Other comparatively youthful men there were Representative Albert Thomas, of Texas, with Mrs. Thomas; Representative Maury Maverick, from the same State, and Representative and Mrs. George H. Mahon, the latter in a print frock with a green sash and green trimming at the hem.

Spring prints were everywhere. Mrs. John McSweeney, wife of Representative McSweeney, had chosen a blue silk patterned in green flowers.

One of the loveliest gowns was that worn by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts. Made of blue brocade, it had a V-shaped decolletage and a slight train.

Mrs. Daniel Reed, president of the Congressional Club, headed the receiving line, while Maj. George Millholland, of Fort Myer, made the introductions. Others in the line were Mrs. S. Otis Bland, in white with a corsage of gardenias; Mrs. Richard Duncan, in lavender chiffon with a long flowing cape; Mrs. Karl Stefan, Mrs. Harry Englebright, Mrs. William H. Larrabee, Mrs. John Rankin and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, who wore a French model of black net with puffed sleeves and diamond clips at the shoulders.

It was largely a "family party," most of the guests being from "the Hill." Among those present were Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen—he was until this year a Representative; Senator and Mrs. James P. Pope; Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, in a black crepe gown with panels of white flowing from the shoulders; Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, Representative and Mrs. Charles R. Clason, of Massachusetts; Representative and Mrs. J. Buell Snyder, the latter in green, and Mrs. William Whittington, former president of the club, in gray satin.

Among the few guests who were not members of Congress were the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Leahy, Dean and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle and the House Physician and Mrs. Calver.

Dinner Arranged By Mary Cootes

Miss Mary Cootes and her brother, Mr. Merritt Cootes, will entertain at a small dinner at their home in Alexandria before the dance to be given tomorrow evening by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Minister to Norway.

After the dance, Miss Cootes will leave for Boston to attend the costume ball given for the benefit of the Museum of Modern Art. She will wear a gown which was made for her grandmother by Worth in Paris, of two-tone brocade in shades of orange and yellow.

During her visit in Boston, Miss Cootes will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Loring. Others from Washington who are going to Boston for the dance are Miss Betty Hardie and Mr. William Brewster.

Mr. Merritt Cootes, who is in the State Department, has been assigned to Montreal as vice consul. He will leave in July for his new post.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Is Honored at Luncheon

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, was the guest in whose honor Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Carlton Hotel. Three centerpieces of spring flowers decorated the table.

The guests were Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Minister to Norway; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Mrs. Arthur J. Altmeyer, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Robert G. Donaldson (Frances Starr); Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. John Herrick, Mrs. Harry L. Hopkins, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. John L. Lewis, Mrs. Ernest K. French Envoy and Mme. Bonnet Guests of Press Club

Underwood & Underwood.

A former newspaperman, the French Ambassador, M. Georges Bonnet, was guest speaker yesterday at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club. Shortly before he was introduced, he and Mme. Bonnet (right) discussed his part on the program with Miss Mary Hornaday (center), president of the club.

French Envoy Lauds Writers

M. Bonnet Is Speaker at Luncheon in Willard.

IT WAS "hands across the sea" yesterday when the French Ambassador, M. Georges Bonnet, accompanied by Mme. Bonnet, lunched with the ladies of the press at the Willard Hotel and proved himself a first-rate diplomat by talking shop to them in a most flattering fashion.

From the time he began ("I will speak to you informally, remembering that I was for a great many years a newspaper man") his audience listened and liked it. If, occasionally, his listeners shifted their eyes from him to his wife, it was probably because they were admiring her natty black hat, with a bird perched at a fashionable angle on the front, or her trim black suit and tailored white blouse. Mme. Bonnet is said to favor black for daytime wear—"just as all smart French women do," someone said yesterday with a knowing air.

But back to the Ambassador and some of his remarks across the luncheon table. "I have known every aspect of your profession, having managed a newspaper in Paris and interviewed statesmen who were inclined to be reticent rather than loquacious," he told the press women by way of introducing his comments, which were centered largely around the power of the printed word. Before he had finished his audience—the press part of it, at least—was pretty proud of the profession it represented.

Mme. Bonnet declined to take part in the program. "In France women do not talk before public gatherings," she explained after the luncheon. "Not since I was in college have I made what you would call a speech." This was the second time since her arrival that Mme. Bonnet has been a guest of the National Press Club. She made her first appearance before it when she attended the annual stunt party shortly after her arrival in Washington.

Dr. Albert G. de Quevedo, of California, widely known psychologist now making a tour of the East, also was a guest of the club and gave a brief talk to close the program.

Among others there, in addition to members, were Mrs. Claude Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mr. Roger Gaucheron, first secretary of the French embassy, and Miss Simone Gaucheron; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Christopher Garnett, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Miss Jane Young and Mrs. Samuel Herrick.

Diplomats Sail Today For Europe From N. Y.

The retiring Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable, the Third Secretary and Mme. Charles Saint and the Secretary of the Yugoslav Legation and Mme. Perazic are sailing from New York today on the French liner Normandie. Rear Admiral and Mme. Sable will spend several weeks in Paris before going to their new post in Tunisia, and Mr. and Mme. Saint will spend the summer at their home in France, returning to Washington next autumn. The Perazics will visit London and Paris before going to Cannes for the early season.

Also sailing on the Normandie is Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, of Washington, who will spend the summer at her chateau in France.

Mrs. Variell Returns From Miami Beach

Mrs. Arthur Davis Variell is at the Shoreham for two weeks after spending the winter in Miami Beach, Fla. She will be joined in a few days by her husband, Brig. Gen. Variell, who remained in Miami Beach to close their home there. Upon leaving the Shoreham they will be at the St. Regis in New York. Mrs. Variell is a cousin of the late Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, U. S. N.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

THE WORTH SPRAGUES, of Warrenton — (remember her as Betty Trescott?)—were having themselves a grand time in the Pall Mall room at the Raleigh the other afternoon. Betty, who really gets prettier every day, had on a beige frock and a wide-brimmed brown hat.

AGNES LATIMER and Perry Taft, who are planning to middle-aisle it some time in July, are two very busy young people. Not only are there things to be done now but they are making plans for the summer months, which includes a trip to California and a visit with the Taft seniors.

APPARENTLY the correct place to get a real honest to goodness tan is down off the Texas Coast, where the President and his confreres have been fishing. Saw Col. Edwin Watson the other day and he was boasting a very deep shade of bronze. If we are not mistaken, congratulations are in order as the Presidential Aide is now no longer a lieutenant colonel, but has replaced the silver leaf on his shoulder with the eagle—a full-fledged colonel. All this happened on the fishing trip.

When Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis tells fortunes at the annual benefit bridge and garden party at Walter Reed Hospital on Saturday afternoon, she will have two assistants, Mrs. James J. Davis and Mrs. M. S. Cox. From what we hear, Mrs. Lewis will need help in order to read all the palms that will be stretched toward her. Last year, you see, she predicted "marriage" for two of her patrons who at that time had not even met their bridegrooms-to-be. Since then, both weddings have taken place.

MRS. J. TEMPLE GWATHMEY, of Virginia has the nicest sense of humor and doesn't mind in the least when people ask how she spells her name. At a recent party she was talking about names and the difficulty in pronouncing hers.

"Why," she said, "when I am in a hotel and anyone is being paged, I answer all names except Smith, Brown and Jones, because any of the rest might—just might, happen to be mine, slightly garbled."

THE House Majority Leader, Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, is a Robert E. Lee enthusiast. As his part in restoring Stratford, birthplace of Lee, he sent a herd of sheep to the colonial plantation. All of which reminds us that if skies are blue today, no end of Washingtonians will be driving out to Montpelier Manor, the Breckinridge Long home, which is to be open for the benefit of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. It it rains today, they'll be going tomorrow.

We saw her in the Shoreham lobby recently and we were impressed with her intent sizing-up of everyone who passed. Possibly she was looking for bigger and better characters for her pages.

The same afternoon we saw Minister Michael MacWhite, of Ireland, striding through the lobby, his hat cocked at the proper angle and a determined look on his face. Bound back to the office, what is your guess?

Scarcely ten minutes later we chatted briefly with Marguerita Montero, who flashed by in a gay printed frock, on her way to the beauty shop.

THE Mayflower is certainly a popular spot for luncheon these warm days. Yesterday we saw the Marvin McIntyres and their daughter, Mrs. Frederick H. Warren. Mrs. McIntyre was attired in a soft grayish blue, while daughter Marie chose rose tones for her costume, with a large black baku hat.

Duncans to Fete Archeology Unit

C. H. Phillips Will Discuss Spain and Portugal at Meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Duncan will entertain members of the Art and Archeology League Saturday afternoon at their home. Mr. Clarence H. Phillips, of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, will speak at 3 o'clock on "Glimpses of Spain and Portugal," illustrating his lecture with slides and motion pictures. After his talk, Dr. and Mrs. Duncan will hold a small reception in the garden.

Members of the Archeological Society of Washington will be honored at a garden party, to be given Sunday afternoon by the president of the society and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, at their home, Rippon Lodge, in Virginia. In case of inclement weather, the gathering will be held inside.

Dupont Circle Home Closed by Mrs. Leiter

Mrs. Joseph Leiter has closed her home on Dupont Circle and is staying with her mother, Mrs. John R. Williams, at the latter's home, 1531 New Hampshire avenue. She will go later in the week to her summer home at Beverly, Mass., returning May 31 for Mrs. Williams' birthday. Mrs. Leiter will remain in Washington until after the graduation of the Georgetown Visitation Convent, and will then go to Beverly. Mrs. Williams will join her there later.

First Lady Gives Third Garden Fete

Mrs. Roosevelt Wears Redingote Gown, Picture Hat.

WEATHER GODS were kind again yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess at her third garden party of the season. It would take more thna a few glowering clouds to darken a party where the lawn and surrounding shrubs were vivid green, the Executive mansion standing out immaculately white, the hundreds of guests in gay spring attire, and a scarlet-coated Marine Band playing light operatic favorites.

The First Lady was wearing a colorful costume. Her redingote gown was of rainbow-striped marquisette over wisteria taffeta. Her picture hat was of the same bluish shade, banded with several colors matching her gown. The full-flaring skirt and elbow-length sleeves were finished with a trio of wisteria velvet bands. As someone familiar with naval rank and insignia laughingly remarked, "I see where Mrs. Roosevelt is now a 'three-striper'!"

Commander R. O. Glover, U. S. N., and Capt. John Reybold, U. S. A., made the introductions. Mrs. Edwin Watson and Mrs. Paul Bastedo, wives of the President's Army and naval aides, were the first to go through the "line."

Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith Bowman (she in ashes of rose crepe) were accompanied by their two sons, Mr. Smith Bowman, jr., and Mr. Delong Bowman. Others from the well-known "cavedwellers" set included Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Harriman, the latter in black net and a matching picture hat; Mrs. Charles Hamlin in black chiffon embroidered in white; Mr. and Mrs. George Oakley Totten (she wore white tweed with navy blue accessories), Mrs. Frederic D. McKenney, another choosing white for her ensemble, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. McKenney Mallan, in a yellow and brown print; Mrs. James Dunlop and Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr.

Child Welfare Discussed In Several D. C. Sessions

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

THE WELFARE of children engaged the attention of important women's groups which met in Washington yesterday. There was the regional conference of State Parent-Teacher Association presidents, addressed by Miss Marian L. Telford, of New York, safety chairman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, described settlement work at Barney Neighborhood House at the weekly meeting of the Federal Community Chest Forum. Senator Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado, spoke before the donor luncheon of the Washington Chapter of the National Home for Children at Denver, and an all-day training course was given new workers by the training and personnel committee of the District of Columbia Girl Scout Council.

Increased vigilance on the part of Parent-Teacher Association members to reduce traffic accidents was urged by Miss Telford at the meeting held at the National P.-T. A. headquarters. "If every parent and every teacher would assume personal responsibility for creating healthy traffic habits on the part of his associates, we should have gone a long way toward solution of our traffic problems," she declared.

The parent who permits his under-age child to drive the family car was described by Miss Telford as a menace to society. "The safe and efficient operation of a motor vehicle in modern traffic requires care, judgment and experience," she said. "Not only are the youthful drivers subject to more accidents, but the fact that their parents permit them to evade the law makes them careless of observing other laws of traffic."

Mrs. G. L. Tallman, of Miami, Fla., secretary of the P.-T. A. traffic safety education project, led the conference, and Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, represented the District.

Those present from other States included Mrs. Elgin Morison, of Frankfort, Ky.; Mrs. F. C. Bayles, of North Carolina; Mrs. W. J. Klein, of West Virginia; Mrs. R. E. Joslyn, of Twin Falls, Idaho; Mrs. Walter L. Bowen, of New Jersey; Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, of Baltimore; Mrs. C. A. Schroetter, of Covington, Ky.; Mrs. Howard H. Hall, of Williamsport, Pa.; Mrs. Ruth Pell Miller, of Charleston, W. Va.; Dr. William T. Sanger, of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. J. Buren Sidbury, of Wilmington, N. C.

Senator Johnson Lauds Denver Home.

THE NATIONAL HOME for Jewish children at Denver is "one of the most worthy social welfare projects in America," members of the Washington chapter were told yesterday by Senator Johnson, who was guest of honor and speaker at their first annual donor luncheon, in the ballroom of the Mayflower.

"If you could know what I know of the home," said Senator Johnson, former Governor of Colorado, "you would gain inspiration for your work. I know of no institution better meeting the requirements for training children for the future than the National Home."

Senator Johnson said he had spoken at graduation exercises of the religious school three years in succession and had seen the entertainment presented.

"Among those little orphans are speakers, musicians, actors and teachers," he said, "and all of them express the joy of living."

Mrs. Albert Jacobson, president of the chapter, introduced the speaker and later presented Mrs. Harry Brandt, chairman, and Mrs. Nathan Peck, co-chairman of the luncheon, as well as those on their committee and representatives of various organizations interested in the national home. Among those at the head table were Mrs. Charles Goldstein, who received a check for $300 for Center Camp for underprivileged Jewish children in Washington, and Rabbi Green, who offered the invocation.

The closing feature was a musical revue, "Folies Parisienne," presented under the direction of Mrs. Albert W. Jacobson, assisted by Mr. Bernard Fischgrund.

The cast included Mrs. David Baum, Mrs. Hymen Berman, Mrs. Murray Braunstein, Mrs. Chester Buchantz, Mrs. Albert Blitz, Mrs. Harry S. Douglas, Mrs. A. J. Fogel, Mrs. Harry Grossman, Mrs. Corbett Gladstone, Mrs. Samuel Koonin, Mrs. David Nessen, Mrs. Abraham Orleans, Mrs. Nathan Reiskin, Mrs. Israel Saslow, Mrs. Saul Schwartzbach, Mrs. David Taven, Mrs. Albert Woronoff, Mrs. Joseph Zupnick and Mr. S. B. Brook.

Settlement Work's Value Is Stressed

A VIVID description of settlement work was given yesterday by Mrs. Carr before the Federal Community Chest Forum. Introduced by Dr. John A. Lapp, president of the forum, she told of the operation of Neighborhood House at 470 N street southwest for the last 36 years. It is a "good neighbor," she said, purposely established in a neighborhood where the help of a "good neighbor" is needed. "For instance, Neighborhood House has a nursery school for youngsters not yet of school age and a kindergarten class. The rate is 5 cents a day, but if the parents cannot pay, the children are taken anyway," she said, "and cared for while their parents work."

She spoke further of the girls clubs in which the members, from 6 to 16, acquire mental, spiritual and cultural growth, and of the boys club which is active three nights a week and provides an outlet for surplus energy which might otherwise be spent under the guidance of a street-corner gang.

Miss Margaret Bell Merrill, head resident of Neighborhood House, also spoke, stressing the need for settlements and their influence.

New Workers Learn Of Girl Scouting

NEW WORKERS in the S. C. Girl Scout Council, meeting at headquarters, 1825 M street northwest, yesterday learned the difference between a tenderfoot and a golden eaglet scout; all about the awards which are made and how they are earned, the standards for camping and other details a member of the council should know.

They gathered at headquarters in the morning, took part in a box luncheon at noon and remained during the afternoon for further instruction under the training and personnel committee. Mrs. O. G. Hankins presided as chairman, and speakers included Mrs. F. Wellman Milliken, of Bethesda, former Girl Scout commissioner of Rhode Island, who gave a general background of the work, and Mrs. Edward S. Johnston, who outlined the children's program.

Part of the morning was given to singing Scout songs. Mrs. Milliken mentioned plans for summer day camps, six of which will be conducted this season. Mrs. C. H. Corlett, jr., is chairman, and Mrs. W. M. Kipplinger, vice chairman. They are to appear in Wesley Heights, Blair Community House, at Buzzards Point; Langdon Park, Carlyn Springs, Va., and there is to be a camp for colored children, the location of which has not been decided.

The group included Mrs. C. E. Waters, Mrs. W. H. Gaskins, Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, Mrs. Gerritt S. Miller, Mrs. Corlett, Mrs. Charles Fenwick, Mrs. Alexander B. Moore, Mrs. N. R. Ellis, Mrs. J. P. Leake, Mrs. J. N. Lutton, Mrs. Walter Valentine, Mrs. Julian D. Simpson, Mrs. John Borton, Mrs. Joseph C. Cox, Mrs. H. C. Kramer, Mrs. Clyde Brown and Mrs. W. F. Myers.

P.-T. A. Heads to Carry Safety Message Into Homes and Schools

Madame Chairman—

By Suzanne

AN IMPORTANT ANNIVERSARY is being celebrated today—the fortieth of the Home Interest Club of Forest Glen, Md. If you live near there you know about it; if you do not, probably you've never heard of the club at all.

It is as modest as its name implies. There are just 18 members and the charter defines the purpose of the club, "to promote sociability in the neighborhood"—yet it has built a school, helped establish a library, helped form the Montgomery Federation of Women's Clubs, inaugurated the Annie M. Wilson Art Scholarships, and was among the first organizations in the Social Service League of Montgomery County.

* * * *

The membership of the club has always been limited to 30. When it was founded in 1897, the members just "got together" for meetings, bringing their children and their needlework, to talk over matters of common interest.

Schools, naturally, were of importance to them. Two acres of land were given the club by the late Mr. B. F. Leighton and there, with the expenditure of $7,500 raised by card parties and other benefits, they built the Woodside School, the first consolidated one in the neighborhood—and turned it over to the county.

* * * *

Apparently the club has had the rare vision to let go of things once it had them well established—put them in proper hands and then look for another field in which to do good.

For years it had been doing welfare work quietly among the needy of the community. Then came the Social Service League, which it joined, continuing its ministrations through a more effective channel. It initiated the move to establish the Silver Spring Library, now located in the Jessup Blair House, on the District line; the Annie W. Wilson scholarship it started is now one of those of the federation. There are other accomplishments, but the list would be too long—all those of a little "home interest" club which didn't set out to do any great work. Oh, yes, last year it won the Maryland State Federation Penny art prize for the best art program in its community.

* * * *

Mrs. Frank Hoadley, president of the Maryland Federation, with six or seven luncheon invitations for today, accepted that of the little group in Forest Glen to be its guest of honor. Another honor guest will be Mrs. George Morey, president of the Montgomery County Federation.

Two charter members will be present, Mrs. Lavinia Engle, of Forest Glen, and Mrs. Rose Karr, of Woodside—not as honor guests—they are just members and the Home Interest Club isn't accustomed to making much fuss over itself.

Leons Honored.

Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Leon and Mr. and Mrs. Ullman gave a dinner for 40 guests at the Shoreham last evening. The event was to celebrate the fifty-fifth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. K. Leon, of Atlantic City, parents of Mrs. Ullman and of Dr. Leon.

Mabel tells me you aren't going to the party tonight.
That's right—I haven't anything to wear!
Don't let that worry you—this PEGGY FROCK of mine only cost $10.95—I got it at BRESLAU'S!
Only $10.95! I'll be there tonight—with a PEGGY FROCK too!

Y. W. C. A. Holds Annual Meeting

Chapter members of the Y. W. C. A. gathered at Vacation Lodge, in Cherryvale, Va., yesterday for their annual meeting, with more than 100 attending. Mrs. Henry deC. Adams, general chairman of the chapter council, presided at the morning session at 11 o'clock and the general session in the afternoon, following the luncheon served by Princeton Chapter, of which Mrs. John H. Elvin is president.

There are eight chapters in the council which have separate meetings during the year and, each spring, the joint conference at Vacation Lodge. Mrs. Irving Ketchum, executive chairman of the membership department, was in charge of arrangements yesterday.

Reports were presented in the afternoon by Mrs. A. Montagu Ferry, chairman of the camp committee, who outlined plans for Kamp Kahlert; Miss Mabel Cook, of the Girl Reserves department, who told of the program for Camp Stay-at-Home, which is conducted at the Y. W. C. A. for girls who cannot leave Washington; Miss Minionette Buckingham, of the Vacation Lodge committee, who presented the schedule of activities there for the summer; Mrs. Carman H. Blough, new chairman of membership, who gave a report of her department, and Mrs. Harold E. Doyle, chapter chairman, who told what the various chapters have accomplished.

There were greetings from Mrs. William L. Corbin, president of the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Hettie P. Anderson, general secretary, at the close of the afternoon.

Miss Mary Howes Fetes Miss Reeve

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of Miss Marylyn Reeve whose engagement to Lieut. Robert N. Downes, U. S. N., was announced recently.

The large oval table was centered with an artistic arrangement of peonies, snapdragons, and early summer flowers. Miniature old-fashioned bouquets in lace frills marked the places of the guests.

The guests included Mrs. Howes, Mrs. Clarence L. Miller, Mrs. Newton Brewer, Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Gertrude Pearson, Miss Nancy Wright, Miss Patsy Brewer, Miss Mary Agnes Young, Miss Kearsley Caldwell and Miss Margaret McMullen.

Women Addressed By Vernon Geddy

Wiliamsburg Manager Talks on Restoration.

The restoration of Williamsburg homes, especially in relation to interior decorating, was described by Vernon Geddy, general manager of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., yesterday in a talk at a luncheon given by Woodward & Lothrop for women writers on newspapers and representatives of women's clubs. Among those present were Mrs. W. Lloyd Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Club; Mrs. Carroll Haig, regent of the District of Columbia chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Miss Aimee Powell, of Dumbarton House, which is operated by the Society of Colonial Dames.

A short talk also was made by Frank Darling, manager of Williamsburg Crafts, Inc.

Mrs. J. T. Lucker Will Head Club

Elected to Serve Second Term by Junior Woman's Group.

Mrs. John T. Lucker last night was re-elected president of the Junior Woman's Club to serve her second term. The annual meeting, at which the election of officers took place, was held in the Jessup Blair Community House with Miss Marion White, the retiring first vice president, presiding.

Other officers elected were Mrs. G. B. Queen, first vice president; Miss Doris Johnston, second vice president; Mrs. Jack Cory, secretary; Miss Louise Whitney, treasurer.

Annual reports were given by Mrs. Howard Parsons, program chairman; Miss Doris Ehrmantrout, ways and means; Mrs. Thomas Rhodes, visiting committee; Miss Ethel Jean Lamond, membership.

Hostesses for the social hour which followed the business session were Miss Lamond, Mrs. Cory, Miss Eva Smythe and Mrs. Irl Schoonover.

The annual spring luncheon of the junior group will be held at the Columbia Country Club Saturday. Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the District Federation, with which the club is affiliated; Mrs. Byron Coon, sponsor of the club, and Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer, will be guests of honor.

Judge Annabel Mathews Heads D.C. Women's Bar

Judge Annabel Mathews, former member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals and now on the general counsel's committee on review of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, last night was elected president of the Women's Bar Association of the District. The meeting was held in the Jefferson room of the Mayflower Hotel, with Miss Beatrice Clephane, president for the past two years, presiding, and 125 members present.

Other new officers are Miss Florence Curoe, attorney with the Veterans' Administration, vice president; Mrs. Larry Maraf Wittenmyer, recording secretary; Miss Mary Agnes Brown, also of the Veterans' Administration, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Vera Rhine, treasurer. Mrs. Pearl B. Klein was elected a member of the executive committee for three years.

A resolution was presented by the American Bar Association committee of the group to raise standards of law practice in the District by requiring, as a preliminary of admission to law school, four years of high school and two years of college work, and, as a preliminary to admission to practice, three years of preparation in a day school or four years in a part-time school, meeting the requirements of the American Bar Association. The motion was referred to a committee for consideration.

Woman Hunted As Key Witness In Keene Death

Stateroom Walls Thin.

Examination of the stateroom yesterday showed that the walls separating cabins are thin and that it is possible to overhear conversations in ordinary tones. If there were a fight or scuffle in the room between the elderly Keene and an assailant, Mrs. Roper, in the adjoining cabin, could not have helped but hear it, according to J. Allen Riordon, manager of the line here.

Why the "Mrs. Loper" who telephoned never called back was the subject of speculation at detective headquarters here. Washington police, who have washed their hands of the case, said the woman may have been intimidated, and fearing harm from the murderer, decided to hold her tongue.

Meanwhile, it was learned that a Federal agency has been quietly investigating the case and will present new information at a hearing in Baltimore Friday morning at 11 o'clock which may throw some light on a mystery which continues to grow more mysterious with each passing day.

Federal Bureau Active.

The Federal Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection is the agency which has been obtaining witnesses and evidence for the last week, while other agencies were disclaiming responsibility. Under Capt. E. N. Merrill, operatives have prepared sufficient evidence to present at a public hearing.

The two Maryland policemen were due to arrive in Washington this morning to gather whatever information they could from police and relatives here. They will then return to Norfolk, where they propose to focus their attentions until the case is solved. They are satisfied, according to Nowitzky, that their search should be concentrated in Norfolk.

The two detectives came to Washington on the same vessel on which Keene was killed. They questioned members of the crew and the officers aboard the ship on their way here. They also continued to make measurements, testimony and studies of every detail of the case.

Coast Guardsmen continued a search of the muddy waters of the lower Potomac yesterday, looking for the body of the vanished man. At the same time, the Bureau of Aeronautics promised Charles F. Keene, jr., that it would instruct fliers to fly low on all trips in the vicinity and to keep on the lookout for the body.

Once the body is loacted police will be materially aided in their attempts to solve the mystery. It would show how Keene was killed, or if he committed suicide. The suicide theory has been practically discarded by all investigators, Norfolk officers have declared the case to be a murder committed during robbery.

Another baffling phase of the case is the failure of the person whom Keene was going to see on a business deal to come forward and tell what he knows. An intense search in Washington by the son failed to uncover who the father was doing business with. All that could be learned was that he hoped to sell a piece of real estate at Virginia Beach. Who the prospective purchaser was or who the seller was, still is unknown.

Still another curious clew was turned up here yesterday when Riordan, manager of the line, stated that a blanket had been laid out on the top berth in Keene's stateroom, as though he was preparing to sleep in the upper birth, which Riordan said was odd. He also said the pillow in the upper berth had an indentation in it as though it had been punched. Neither berth was slept in, however.

One of the queer developments of the day was the fact that no one at the offices of the steamship line remembered receiving the mysterious telephone call from 'Mrs. Loper." Repeated questioning of employes there brought only dehials, Nowitzky said.

"How the name Loper developed is one of the strangest twists of all," Nowitzky commented. "Everybody seemed to know about the phone call, and there actually was, we believe, a Mrs. Loper on the boat, but not a living soul could be found who would say he received that telephone call."

An attempt was made to trace the phantom telephone call through the telephone company but it was fruitless. P. G. Minter, general agent for the steamship line at Norfolk, said he knew of no one by the name of Loper. He could offer no suggestion of who it was who insisted on talking with him about Keene.

Efforts to obtain fingerprints in the missing man's stateroom also failed. Plenty of bloodstains were found and fingermarks in blood were successfully photographed on the handrail outside Keene's cabin, but no prints which would help show who made them could be obtained.

Commander H. C. Cornell of the Coast Guard, Eugene C. Carlson, of the Department of Commerce, and J. Frank Staley, of the Justice Department, chairman, will conduct the hearing at Baltimore, in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

Officers and crew will be interrogated and other witnesses will be called to the stand in a public hearing. The three-man board was authorized by recent legislation to investigate all losses of life at sea. Its power, however, is limited to taking of testimony and filing a report, copies of which go to the Treasury, Justice Department and Commerce Department.

Charles Keene, jr., Navy lieutenant, was gratified yesterday that the Maryland State police had finally entered the investigation. For several days it appeared that no police force would investigate because of lack of jurisdiction. Young Keene said he was positive his father was the victim of foul play, and wished to have that established "to clear his name of the stigma of suicide."

C. I. O. Approaches N. Y. Office Clerks

New York, May 18 (AP). — The metropolis whose skyscrapers each evening disgorge thousands of prospective members was chosen today as the starting place for the Committee for Industrial Organization's campaign to enroll the Nation's office workers without factory connections.

Key man in the campaign will be 30-year-old Lewis Merrill, president of the New York bookkeepers, stenographers and accountants union which today announced secession from the American Federation of Labor and affiliation with the C. I. O.

The union, claiming 4,000 to 5,000 members, voted to bolt the federation by 1,200 to 4, last night as William Collins, representative of the federation, looked on.

"We tried to save them," Collins commented today, "but subversive Communistic propaganda was too much for us."

Rail Official Resigns.

Cleveland, May 18 (AP).—F. M. Whitaker, 69, submitted his resignation today as vice president in charge of traffic of the Chesapeake & Ohio, Nickel Plate and Pere Marquette railroads, effective July 1. He had a C. & O. serice record of more than 52 years.

of the daylight sub-committee, of which he is chairman, he said:

"I will be guided entirely by the wishes of the people," he expostulated, along with the assurance that he has no intention of "inflicting" an extra hour of daylight on Washingtonians unles a majority of them want it.

Sacks yesterday expressed some surprise at the strength of the opposition to his plan as revealed by Monday's hearings. He had been led to believe by the trend of his office mail, where the voting was five to one for saving daylight, that the opposition was disorganized, if not weak.

Most of the witnesses at the hearing, however, denounced the proposition. As a consequence, the subcommittee will meet in executive session early next week to go over its daylight saving mail and make plans accordingly. A report to the full committee is to be made May 28.

The Musicians Union and the Central Labor Union, many of whose members are at least married to housewives, stepped forward to back Mrs. Wright's cause yesterday. Both are oposed to clock tampering. The Central Labor Union adopted a resolution to that effect. The musicians group with a membership of 7,000, instructed its president, A. C. Hayden, to record its "no."

Atlas Head Denies Part in 'Rigging'

New York, May 18 (AP).—Roger D. Edwards, of New Bedford, Mass., president of Atlas Tack Corporation, said today that if there was any manipulation of Atlas sotck in the winter of 1935-1936, he was unaware of it.

This was the burden of his testimony as an involuntary defense witness in the Securities and Exchange Commission hearing of charges that the New York Stock Exchange firm of W. E. Hutton & Co., three of its partners as individuals, and a member of another firm "rigged" the stock by circulating misleading rumors regarding the company's prospects.

Jews Thrown Into Panic.

Flooded Fairbanks Refugees Return

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 18 (AP).—Ice fields stood firm on Yukon tributaries tonight as receding flood waters permitted returning refugees to survey their losses in a spring inundation that covered three-fourths of Fairbanks.

More than half of Fairbanks' 2,100 inhabitants fled their homes. They had been housed in school buildings. Schools reopened with almost normal attendance.

'Dead' Sharecropper Reappears After Year

Memphis, Tenn., May 18 (AP).—Announcement today of the reappearance of Frank Weems, 46-year-old Arkansas colored sharecropper, reawakened the controversy which attended his disappearance nearly a year ago.

J. R. Butler, president of the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, announced Weems Lad been "found alive" in Chicago.

Weems disappeared June 9, 1936. H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the tenant union, charged at the time he had been beaten by planters near Earle, Ark. He announced plans for a "funeral" after he said he heard Weems died.

Until the former king's announcement, many had believed that the Duke of Kent, his youngest brother, and the Princess Royal Mary, his only sister, would attend.

There were indications King George VI and Queen Mother Mary supported this, but that the government insisted the wedding be a private affair without royal or official British representation.

"Baldwin has won again" was a comment heard outside the gray-walled chateau where Edward and his betrothed remained in seclusion.

Baldwin opposed Edward in December and his government subsequently has indicated its aim was to dissociate the former monarch from British public life and concentrate publicity upon George VI.

The duke's wedding date is the anniversary of his father, King George V's, birth—the late monarch was born June 3, 1865, and died January 20, 1936.

The wedding date also is 20 days before Edward's forty-third birthday, and 16 days before Mrs. Warfield becomes 41.

Rogers and attorneys for the duke and Mrs. Warfield went to Tours to ask the district attorney for a dispensation suspending French laws that require publication of bans 15 days before a wedding and that such weddings occur in the town hall. It was indicated the suspension would be granted.

Limitation of the wedding guests to "those who have been with them" recently would make the wedding small. In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, who were hosts on the Riviera to Mrs. Warfield after she fled England shortly before the abdication, those who have been with the couple include Lord and Lady Brownlow, now in England, and Lord and Lady Mountbatten.

Athletics Keep Hold on American League Lead With Victory Over Tigers, 8-7

NATS RALLY, DOWN BROWNS, 7-6, DESPITE ERRATIC PLAY

This Morning

Excuse This Column, Mr. Bell!

By Shirley Povich.

This guy Beau Bell, of the Browns, made a mugg out of this department yesterday—but I had company. He made muggs out of the Washington pitchers, too.

POVICH.

The fellow must be good. He had two strikes against him before he even stepped on the field at Griffith Stadium. He was out there trying to prove Povich knew what he was talking about and until yesterday no mortal had ever been able to prove that.

It was getting to the point where this department was beginning to take a strange pride in its fallibility. For years it had been six, two and even that I couldn't pick a winner in a two-horse race. This department's opinions, which had been selling for years at 3 cents, on the street or home delivered, constituted sheer profiteering.

• • • •

And so, yesterday, when I rose to remark in this space that this guy Roy Chester Bell was something of a hitter and, in fact, one of the greatest to come into the league in years, it had all the earmarks of a dirty trick on Bell.

• • • •

The fellow had never done anything to me and there I was putting the hex on him. It just goes to show that we guys stop at nothing to get a piece for the paper. Anyway, with Povich on his side, Bell was under a horrible handicap. And I was prepared to extract a fiendish glee from the proceedings if Beau went for the collar, as we say, or, in other words, went hitless.

• • • •

But now, well, more power to him. Maybe he's lifted this department's curse. Anyway, I'm seriously thinking about risking two megs on that thing in the fourth at Belmont this afternoon.

• • • •

Before this, though, perhaps I should have mentioned what Bell did out there yesterday when he was raising his batting average to .475. He did, as you'll notice by the box score, get three hits.

• • • •

He stepped right up there in the first inning, a big right-handed hitter with a slight crouch, and missed a vicious swipe at one of Carl Fischer's pitches. Ha! ha! I chortled up there in the press box, toying with the notion that mine was something of a supernatural power and on the verge of ejaculating what fools these mortals be.

• • • •

But Beau Bell didn't miss that next full-blown swing of his. He caught hat pitch somewhere near the business end of his bat and there, folks, was one of the grandest hree-baggers you ever did see sailing right over Ben Chapman's head in deep centerfield. It drove in a run.

• • • •

Well, anything could happen after that. Any guy who could fly into the very face of the Povich curse and whack that kind of a three-bagger had limitless possibilities. And Bell had 'em.

• • • •

He didn't get around to batting again until the third inning and Fischer was still pitching. The Browns needed to do something about Washington's 5-to-1 lead and Roy Chester started to do something about it immediately. He whaled a two-bagger against the concrete in centerfield. It drove in a run. It was no bunt.

• • • •

Pete Appleton was out there pitching for Washington in the fifth inning when Bell (that man again!) was there at the plate once more. But Bell, for the life of him, couldn't recognize any difference between Appleton and Fischer, apparently. Anyway, the two-base hit that he banged into centerfield, his third consecutive extra-base wallop, wasn't much different from the two-bagger that he thumped out against Fischer a couple of innings before.

• • • •

And if ever a guy batted in hard luck, it was the same Mr. Bell a couple of innings later. Ben Chapman was laying for him this time. He was waiting out there in suburban center field, hard by the District line, when Bell swung. And Chapman only had to race back a quarter of a mile to catch the ball.

• • • •

If I remember rightly, I had little to say about Bell's fielding in this space yesterday morning. That was because I had felt a bit bad about putting the guy on the spot, I guess, and didn't want to bring up his fielding. Because in the first place he never struck me or anybody else as much of a fielder, and I thought that part of it would be better left unsaid.

• • • •

So what happens? Nothing except that in the sixth inning this Bell dashes across country and makes a scintillating one-hand stab of Ben Chapman's liner on a play that made him appear to be a composite of Tris Speaker, Duffy Lewis and Sammy West.

Oh, yeah—they finally stopped Bell's slugging. In the ninth inning—when they hit him with a pitched ball!

Chubby Dean Hits Homer To Win Game

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Youthful Chubby Dean kept the Athletics on top of the American League today by hitting a three-run homer in the eighth that gave the Mackmen an 8-to-7 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Peters, first up for the A's in the eighth, walked. Moses was hit by a pitched ball. Eldon Auker then fanned Bob Johnson, only to see Dean, former Duke University star, slam one of his underhand pitches over the rightfield wall to win the game.

It was the fourth straight victory for the A's over the Tigers and marked the third triumph of the year for the veteran Harry Kelley.

Hank Greenberg tripled with one out in the ninth, but Peters picked up Walker's smash and Greenberg was run down between third and home, Peters to Hayes to Peters.

Three Philadelphia errors in the first, coupled with two hits, gave the Tigers a three-run lead. They increased this to 5 to 1 in the third on doubles by Walker and Herman and Rogell's single.

However, the A's kept pounding away at George Gill and knocked him out in the sixth by scoring two runs on successive hits by Moses, Johnson and Dean. The A's previously had picked up a run in the second on Hayes' double and Cissell's single and two more in the fourth on Hayes' homer with one on.

Auker replaced Gill and, aided by English's homer in the sixth and doubles by himself and Fox in the eighth seemingly had the game won until Dean came to bat in the eighth.

Sox Get Six Hits, Bow to Yanks 4-0

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 18.—Spurgeon Chandler today moved another step nearer a regular berth on the Yankee pitching staff when he shut out the Chicago White Sox, 4-0, with six hits and thus kept the Yanks within a half game of the league-leading Athletics.

Victory was sweet for the former University of Georgia football star, for on May 9 he had hurled a five-hit game and yet dropped the decision to the White Sox. Today he came to his own assistance with two of the winners' eight hits, one of which drove in a run.

Lou Gehrig's second home run of the season scored the Yanks' first run in the second and Chandler drove home Bill Dickey, who had singled and moved up on Tony Lazzeri's infield out, with the second.

Tommy Henrich, rookie leftfielder, extended his hitting streak through his sixth big league game with a single in the sixth and scored after Joe DiMaggio's hit and an infield out by Gehrig. Henrich's sacrifice and Appling's error brought home Red Rolfe, who had walked, with the last run in the eighth.

Millies' Hit in 9th Wins Game After Mates Lose 5-1 Lead

By Shirley Povich.

In a nightmarish ball game perpetrated in broad daylight, the Nats woke up in the eighth inning yesterday, tied the score and won the game in the ninth. But they would prefer that no questions be asked.

Because then it would have to be told how they were guilty of everything but defeat—and that had its very grave possibilities. They beat the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 6, because Buddy Lewis drove in the tying run in the eighth with a two-bagger and Walter Millies' single produced the winning run with two out in the ninth. But they had a horrible time of it all afternoon because:

(1) They wasted a 5-1 lead acquired in the second inning.

(2) Ossie Bluege, of all people, tossed not one but two damaging errors into the proceedings.

(3) Carl Fischer simply stared at a ball that was lying within reach while two Brownies were rounding the bases.

(4) Ben Chapman managed to get himself picked off second base by, conservatively, 10 feet in the midst of a Washington rally.

(5) Buddy Lewis let a throw from Ben Chapman skip past his glove while the bases were full of Brownies, and

(6) Ossie Bluege beat out a hit at first base, but neglected the formality of touching the bag and was out when Catcher Rollie Hemsley ambled down to the base and touched it before Bluege could retrace his steps.

But when matters ended happily in that ninth, there were the Nats no longer in the cellar but in sixth place in the league standings despite all their travail. They zoomed ahead of both the Browns and the White Sox.

It was beginning to get mighty serious for the Nats along about the eighth inning after Earl Caldwell had shut them out for five innings in a row and showed no disposition to lose his 6-5 lead. But then the Washington athletes started to reform.

Manager Bucky Harris unveiled Cecil Travis as a pinch hitter, Travis' first apearance in three weeks since wrenching his knee. Cecil, batting for Riddle, took two strikes and then bashed one of Caldwell's pitches to center for a single. At that point, he bowed out, Buck Newsom running for him.

Manager Harris permitted Pete Appleton to bat for himself and Harland Clift, who had kept the Nats in the ball game with two errors early in the proceedings, then committed a third. He took Appleton's tame grounder and heaved it wildly to Davis at first, leaving all hands safe and putting Newsom on second.

With none as yet out, matters appeared bright for a nice big inning, but a moment later the Nats were willing to settle for a tie. Because Ben Chapman, disdaining a sacrifice bunt, poked a hard smash toward second and Carey turned it into a double play with a sensational one-hand pickup. Newsom reached third on the proceedings and with two out now the issue was strictly up to Buddy Lewis.

Lewis didn't dally. He bashed a two-bagger into leftfield, Newsom crossed the plate and it was tied at 6-6.

They sent Jack Knott in to hold the Nats in that ninth, but Johnny Stone got 'em off to a flying start by beating out a hit down the first base line. Al Simmons sacrificed him to second and strategy called for a deliberate pass to Buddy Myer. When

Favorites Win Close Matches As Southern Golf Play Begins

By the United Press.

East Lake Country Club, Atlanta, Ga., May 18.—Mrs. Mark McGarry, St. Petersburg, Fla., defending champion, sank a 7-foot putt on the twenty-fourth hole today to defeat Mrs. R. E. Winger, of Fort Worth, in the first round of the Southern Women's Golf tournament.

Mrs. McGarry led at the turn, but Mrs. Winger evened the match on the sixteenth. They halved the next seven holes with Mrs. Winger losing a chance to win when Mrs. McGarry stymied her on the twenty-first green.

Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, medalist with a 77 in the record field of 129 entries, was hard pressed to defeat Mrs. Frank Ford, jr., of Charleston, 2 up.

Close Match.

In another close match, Mrs. Sam Israel, of New Orleans, defeated Mrs. George Wilcox, of Miami, 2 and 1. Allene Hoover, of Greensboro, N. C., finished with a 3-and-2 victory over Mrs. E. L. Donaldson, Knoxville.

Lily Harper, 103-pound golfer from Portsmouth, Va., turned 3 up on Marion Gayer, of Charleston, and eliminated here, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Estelle Page, of Greensboro, S. C., early favorite in the tournament and only qualifyer to equal par, won over Mrs. Polly Lambert, of Greenville, S. C., 6 and 5. Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, eliminated Mrs. Jack Langdon, of Anniston, Ala., 6 and 5.

Other results in the championship division were: Edna Saenger, of Shreveport, La., defeated Anna Thompson, of Fort Worth, 7 and 6; Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C., defeated Mrs. John Degner, Charlotte, N. C., 3 and 1; Francis Owen, Jacksonville, Fla., defeated Mrs. B. Cockrell, Gadsden, Ala., 5 and 4; Mrs. George Brantley, Jacksonville, Fla., eliminated Mrs. Robert Coffee, Orlando, Fla., 6 and 5; Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., defeated Mrs. Elsie Haines, Washington, D. C., 5 and 3; Bettie Jameson, San Antonio, defeated Mrs. George Sherill, Atlanta, 6 and 5.

Burnett's 72 Leads Invitation Qualifiers at Manor Club

Columbia Golfers Pace Women's Play

By Merrell Whittlesey.

The wooded first nine and the slick greens of the Manor Golf Club rose in protest of the low scoring barrage of previous Invitation tournaments yesterday, and only four golfers out of 200 starters, were able to better 78. A majority of the "name" players were forced into the 80s and 90s in the first round of qualifying in the fifth renewal of the tournament.

Volney Burnett, burning up the first nine in sub-par 34, lost his touch on the return trip and took 38 but it was good for temporary medalist honors.

Frank "Shanty" Allen, who last week marched to the finals at Chevy Chase, was the main casualty, the former Georgetown Prep star soaring to 84 blows and out of first flight consideration. Harry Pitt and Miller B. Stevinson, former champions, were on the brink of nonqualification with 78 and another previous titleholder, Brad Burrows, failed to turn in a card.

Burnett made three birdies on the first nine, placing his approach shots within two feet of the pin on the third and eighth holes and sinking a 6-foot putt on the seventh hole. He was over on three holes on the back nine, three putting the eleventh and missing the green on 14 and 18.

Martin J. McCarthy, the Beaver Dam "iron man," stood on the ninth tee, needing par in for a 38; hit drive next to a stump and before he reached the fairway he wasted three shots and apparently blew his chances. He rolled in a 40-foot putt on the same hole, however, and proceeded to burn up the second nine in subpar 34, for a 74, two strokes behind Burnett.

Bobby Brownell, the D. C. amateur champion from the host club, birdied the ninth hole to go out in 38 and returned in one less stroke for a 77, the same score posted by Maury Fitzgerald, who used 6 strokes on the last hole and 6 on the fifteenth to lose a chance at medal honors.

Ralph Quinter, the Chevy Chase luminary, was another casualty yesterday and Parker Nolan, Earl McAleer, Tommy Bones and Nathan Kaufman, of Baltimore, were other potential first flighters over the qualifying limit.

Levi Yoder, the favorite on the basis of his victories at Chevy Chase and Manor the past two weeks, leads a field of some 200 players today in quest of a first-sixteen berth and a crack at Burnett's score.

Police Show Gets Scott And Quarles

Fourth 10-Round Bout Signed by Ahearn Yesterday.

Norment Quarles, former national intercollegiate featherweight boxing champion, has been matched with Cowboy Howard Scott, the transplanted Oklahoman, in one of the 10-rounders on the police benefit show at Griffith Stadium Wednesday, June 2.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn received the signed contracts of both fighters yesterday, and the commission immediately put its stamp of approval on the battle.

The signing of Quarles and Scott closed the fourth 10-rounder which Ahearn has closed out for the card to be staged for the benefit of the widows and orphans of members of the District of Columbia Metropolitan Police Force.

Other matches on the card, each a 10-rounder, follow:

Lou Gevinson, Washington featherweight, vs. Johnny Pena, New York.

Ossie Stewart, Pittsburgh Negro middleweight, vs. Tom Chester, New York.

Scott and Quarles have met twice before, with the Oklahoman the winner each time. Quarles holds two decisions over Freddie Miller, former N. B. A. featherweight champion. Quarles defeated Miller when the Cincinnati boy was champion, in a non-title fight. Scott has an impressive 1936 record, having whipped, among others, Bat Battalino, Frankie Klick, Lew Massey, Eddie Cool and Joe Rivers; knocked out Johnny DeFoe, Davey Fine and Chino Alvarez and drawn with Lew Feldman.

Matchmaker Ahearn is debating whether to add another 10-rounder or stage two sixes. He is anxious to have Ray Ingram on the card, perhaps to be pitted against Harry Jeffra, No. 1 bantamweight challenger, or Joey Archibald, the Providence bantam.

Riddle Is Injured, X-Ray Discloses

Clark C. Griffith, owner of the Nats, yesterday intensified his protest to Baseball Commissioner Landis anent the Johnny Riddle deal with Indianapolis when X-ray pictures of Riddle's elbow revealed two chipped bones and a large growth.

Maintaining that Riddle was not physically fit when the Nats purchased him from Indianapolis two weeks ago in a deal that sent Catcher Shanty Hogan and a sum of cash to the Indianapolis club, Griffith is insisting that an adjustment be made.

Riddle will remain with the Nats pending Landis' decision. Landis is expected in Washington next week at which time he may rule on the case.

Six Pitchers Help Indians Beat Red Sox

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 18.—The Cleveland Indians used six pitchers, including the phenomenal Bob Feller, today while rushing from behind with a ninth inning rally to take the series' opener from the Red Sox, 7 to 4.

Feller, making his first start since his pitching arm became troublesome in St. Louis on April 21, was the fourth Indian heaver to go into action, at the start of the last half of the ninth. He faced but one batter, Doc Cramer, and when Bob threw only one strike while passing that slugger. Manager Steve O'Neill yanked him for Lloyd Brown.

"Feller's arm is in perfect shape, but he was just a bit wild," O'Neill explained. "He has been out so long and that just wasn't the right spot for him to return to action."

Mel Harder opened for the Indians and held the Red Sox scoreless until the seventh, when they pulled into a 4-to-3 lead with four hits, one of them Jimmy Foxx's fourth homer of the season, which came with a mate on base.

Mallos Hurls Roosevelt to First Victory

Sammy Allows 3 Hits as Central Bows by 7-3 Score.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Roosevelt High sent Central to permanent confinement in the interhigh baseball cellar yesterday. Sammy Mallos allowed the cellar-winners three hits, all singles, as he pitched the Rough Riders to a 7-3 victory at Roosevelt Stadium, their first of the series.

Samuel aided his own cause with two of the nine hits Roosevelt collected off Slim Buck Jones, Central right-hander. Four double-plays marked the game in which Mallos faced more than three batters in only two innings.

The Rought Riders galloped to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Toddy Lagos singled, John Thrift walked and Sherrard Robertson, nephew of Clark Griffith, doubled. Two walks, a bunt by Mallos, which Central failed to convert into a put-out, and a single

Long Shot Victories Feature Hagerstown Inaugural

Five Tickets Held on Rich Daily Double

Pays $504.70 as Dudley C. Wins; Fowler Set Down 3 Days.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown Race Track, May 18. There was gold in them thar mountains today for five customers of the Hagerstown Interstate Fair Association's turf show who had the good judgment or good fortune or a combination of both to play numbers "3 and 5" in the daily double. This select group stepped up to pay-off windows and collected $504.70 cents fo rtheir investment of $2 in twin wagers.

The "double," the first ever conducted on the first and second races hereabouts, involved two horses at the opposite ends of their careers. Green Water, a 2-year-old filly, began the transaction and Stand By, an 11-year-old gelding, put on the finishing touches. Green Water paid a $23.80 mutuel in her own right, while Stand By provided his backers with $48.60. It was a great triumph for Jockey F. Munoz, who rode both of the horses, but who failed to have a ticket on the fortune producing combination.

While the daily double stole the show from a monetary angle, it was fitting that the feature race show provided the most thrilling of the afternoon's program. A nose and a head separated three of the eight starters in the Harry E. Bester Purse event, named for the man who revived racing here a decade ago.

Heavily Driven.

Victory went to Barnstormer, owned and trained by young Claude Feltner, of Berryville, Va., and capably handled by Jockey L. Machado. Barnstormer was heavily driven to the wire to save the purse from the favored Jadaan and Sylvia G. The trio made a dive for the finish line, seemingly at the time, but the judges separated them to the satisfaction of that part of the crowd near the finish line.

Barnstormer, a winner on the big time Maryland tracks, paid an $8 mutuel and was clocked in the creditable time of $1:23.

The ten-day meeting here got under way auspiciously. More than 5,000 persons enjoyed the inaugural card under a bright sun, while the horses operated over a fast track. Betting was brisk, much to the pleasure of track officials.

For half of the six and one-half furlong contest, a two-horse battle ensued between Barn Stormer and Sylvia G. It was not until the final swing for the stretch that Jadaan gained enough momentum to become a threat. However, Jadaan got out of control of Jockey R. Root at the last bend and went very wide, a fact that might have caused his defeat.

The day's favorite scored in the third race, when Alahad, a winner at Pimlico, defeated Jeune Etoile by a length. The Sir Gallahad filly brought her backers a $4.50 mutuel.

Miss Epe Scores.

Jockey Leon Garrett and Miss Epe, a game filly, overcame a series of bad breaks to win the fifth race over the five furlong course. Shut off twice and forced to be pulled up on each occasion, Miss Epe had the spunk to come to the outside and respond to Garrettt's whip with a rush that downed Nay Nay by a length. Third money went to Lady Buck. Miss Epe saved the favorite players who backed her down to a $3.20 mutuel.

Following the race, the stewards announced that Jockey Tommy Fowler had been suspended for three days for rough riding. He appeared to have pulled over and blocked Miss Epe.

Another select group in the crowd collected to the tune of a stimulating $97 mutuel after the sixth race. Dudley C. provided the big pay-off after downing Sunway and Tambov.

The favorite players came into their own when Sammy Palumbo rode Minna, the 7 to 5 shot owned by Mrs. G. H. Pearce, Reigh Tetarch set the pace for three quarters, when Palumbo caught her on the stretch turn and won by two lengths. Minna paid $4.70 for each $2. It was a double for Palumbo.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREENWATER, $23.80, $7.90, $8.70; SCHLEY GOREE, $6.20, $4.60; EMMA BLY, $9.40.

GREENWATER, off alertly, was kept in the center of the track until reaching the backstretch, disposed of EMMA BLY to take command and had to be kept to drive to stave off close of SCHLEY GOREE. The latter, outrun for two furlongs, came gamely on the outside. EMMA BLY, first away, saved ground while setting the pace, but stumbled entering the backstretch and was tiring at the end. JIM CORNELL stopped after chasing the early pace. The others had no mishaps.

SECOND RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:46. Off at 2:50½. Winner, E. H. Titmus, Jr.'s, ch. g. (11) by Trompe La Mort—Textile Queen. Trained by S. Fiammia. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:28 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAND BY, $48.60, $18.20, $9.50; RUNNING WATER, $3.70, $3.00; CHANNING, $2.90.

STAND BY sprinted into the lead at once, saved ground and easily held RUNNING WATER safe. The latter was taken under steadying restraint after being outrun by the winner and rallied to close gamely on the inside when put to a drive. CHANNING went to the outside for racing room, gained sharply approaching the stretch and tired in the closing 20 yards. DASH IN made up some ground in the late stages. TOP SHELL tired after going forwardly.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $504.70.

THIRD RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:24. Off at 3:28. Winner, Mrs. D. T. Doerner's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALAHAD, $4.50, $2.70, $3.00; JEUNE ETOILE, $3.20, $3.20; PLAYING DAN, $6.00.

ALAHAD, rated along within striking distance of the leaders, took command when called upon and was kept to a drive to the end. JEUNE ETOILE followed the pace of TWEETY, saved ground throughout and had no excuses. PLAYING DAN came with a rush in the final furlong. TULEYRIES RUBY was shuffled back after a quarter and closed gamely. TWEETY stopped from hustling tactics while setting the pace. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. The Harry Bester. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:58½. Off at 4:10. Winner, Claude Feltner's ch. m. (5), by Strolling Player—Stargaze. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARNSTORMER, $8.00, $4.00, $2.70; JADAAN, $3.70, $2.50; SYLVIA G., $2.70.

BARNSTORMER, hard ridden throughout, shook off repeated challenges from SYLVIA G. and outgamed JADAAN in the final drive. The latter went to the leaders with a rush after a half, but swung far eptering the stretch. SYLVIA G. was hard used running with BARNSTORMER and hung on willingly. ROUGH PLAYER was going strongly at the end and appears ready. STINGAREE could not keep up. CHIEF HOLLIS was taken up shortly after the break and showed nothing thereafter.

FIFTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:47. Winner, Mrs. I. P. Engle's ch. f. (3), by Sea Rock—London Charm. Trained by R. Payne. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:02.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS EPE, $3.20, $2.80, $2.50; NAY NAY, $5.10, $4.00; LADY BUCK, $3.20.

MISS EPE, much the best, was squeezed back going to the first turn, had to be taken up when crowded by NAY NAY, recovered to come to the outside and came with a rush in the final sixteenth to win going away. NAY NAY, off in front, saved ground throughout, but was tiring at the end. LADY BUCK went to the leaders on the outside with a sharp move and closed willingly. VERITAS gained gradually. ADO had a flash of early speed.

SIXTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:19½. Winner, R. L. Clark's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUDLEY C., $97.00, $17.60, $7.50; SUN WAY, $4.00, $3.10; TAMBOV, $2.90.

DUDLEY C., nicely handled, worked his way to the leaders gradually, saved ground after getting to the front and held SUN WAY safe. The latter was steered very wide throughout and weakened after getting to the front and can do much better. TAMBOV was hard ridden throughout and hung on well under punishment. PRECIOUS KING faltered after setting the early pace. EXAGGERATION stopped after getting to the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:51. Off at 5:52. Winner, Mrs. G. H. Pearce's b. m. (5), by St. Henry—Miss Minerva. Trained by G. H. Pearce. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:55 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINNA, $4.70, $3.20, $2.60; LIGHT ACTION, $4.00, $3.60; CONTRITE, $4.40.

MINNA, off in the first flight, saved ground while close to the pace and was in hand at the end. LIGHT ACTION was off in a tangle, taken to the outside and was running well at the end. CONTRITE, close to the pace, got to the front and then stopped. REIGH TETRARCH had early speed, but tired. CANTIE and SUSPECT were never factors.

Donovan Carded On Rassle Show

Irish Jack Donovan, Boston, will return to Turner's Arena tomorrow night to meet Mike Mazurki, former all-around athlete at Manhattan, in one of the 30-minute bouts on the card featuring the four Duseks—Ernie, Rudy, Joe and Wally.

Donovan gave up quite a boxing career to become a wrestler. As a boxer he fought Marty Gallagher and Henry Lamar, Washington heavyweights.

In the feature bout, Ernie Dusek meets Wee Willie Davis; in the semiwindup, Joe Dusek meets Joe Cox, and in other 30-minute brawls Rudy meets Gino Garibaldi and Wally, a first cousin, tackles Hank Barber.

Fight Ban Appealed.

Newark, N. J., May 18.—Federal Judge Guy L. Fake today allowed the Madison Square Garden Corporation to appeal his denial of a temporary injunction to restrain James J. Braddock, world heavyweight boxing champion, from fighting Joe Louis in Chicago June 22.

Wheat Prices Soar 5 Cents In Pit Flurry

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 18.—In feverish trading, wheat soared practically 5 cents a bushel today, impelled by authoritative estimates of huge domestic crop losses and by Canadian dust storms.

A shrinkage of 30,000,000 bushels in the 1937 prospective wheat yields of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma during the past fortnight because of severe moisture deficit was announced by B. W. Snow, widely known crop expert. He said the wilting stage of crop damage has been reached in the three States named, and that deterioration will continue unless heavy general rainfall takes place this month.

At the close, wheat was 3⅝ to 4⅝ cents above yesterday's finish; may, $1.31¾ to $1.31⅞; July $1.21½ to $1.21¾; September, $1.19⅞ to $1.20⅜; corn, ¼ off to 1¼ up; May, $1.33½; July, $1.19⅝ to $1.19½; September, $1.09½ to $1.09⅝; oats unchanged to 1⅜ advance; May 52¾ to 52⅞, and rye showing 2 cents to 3½ cents bulge. Provisions closed 5 cents to 17 cents dearer.

Insurance Paid 6% of Income In Depression

21.9 Billion Disbursed by Life Companies in Six Years.

New York, May 18.—Six dollars and sixty cents out of every $100 of national income paid out from 1930 to 1935, inclusive, were distributed by life insurance companies of the United States, according to George L. Hunt, chairman of the executive committee for national life insurance week, in commenting on the part played by American life insurance in alleviating the economic stress wrought by seven years of depression. This 6.6 per cent of the national income paid out included all disbursements of the companies except loans on life insurance policies, which loans saved thousands of businesses, homes and lives.

"Total disbursements by American life insurance companies during the six depression years," explained Mr. Hunt, "which includes payments of all types (except loans) to policyholders, management expenses, dividends to stockholders, taxes and supplies, aggregated $21,906,046,947. Meanwhile, national income paid out, 1930 to 1935 inclusive, totaled $331,698,000,000.

"Payments to policyholders and beneficiaries, in the six years, which represents death payments, matured endowments, annuities, dividends, surrender values and disability benefits (again excluding loans on policies) totaled $16,196,834,911.

"Four dollars and ninety cents out of every $100 of national income paid out were paid directly to policyholders or their beneficiaries. This 4.9 per cent of national income paid out did not include loans on life insurance policies."

The Market

Stocks Rally With Increased Trading Near Close; Wheat Strong.

New York, May 18.—Stocks rallied in the last hours of trading after early dullness and in a total turnover of around 1,250,000 shares closed with gains of 1 to 3 points for the active steel, railroad and motor bus issues. The tone was a shade easier in Government bonds. Grains spurted on unfavorable crop news. July wheat rose 3⅝ cents to 121¾ cents a bushel.

In the opinion of some close observers the stock market is now undergoing the strain from selling which had been feared several months ago when President Roosevelt first spoke out against "hot money." British speculators who fell into trouble over the collapse in commodity and gold share markets, when the gold price cut rumor was allowed to spread, have been taken over by the banks, according to information from London. That means the market will continue to see stock for sale for a while, because banks "take care" of those in trouble merely to give more time for the sale of assets.

British selling in this market is said to make up a large part of the total, and if it were coming during active trading it could be absorbed without difficulty. The thinness of the current market exaggerates its importance. Meanwhile the recent sharp increase in foreign balances here, as shown in the Federal Reserve reports, indicates the turning of securities into cash, which awaits either transfer abroad or reinvestment here.

Sterling Firm.

That some of this liquidation money is going abroad is indicated by the current strength in sterling. Dollars today were lower against sterling but strong in terms of Frenh francs, as before many weeks another financial "crise" is expected to develop in Paris. Just to give some semblance of proof to the point that the stock market would have little difficulty in handling foreign selling in a period of activity among home traders and speculators, the tone hardened nicely in the afternoon market.

Most of the morning was given over to a gradual chipping of prices with long intervals between sales. Disinterested buyers finally plucked up courage, after seeing prices for some of the leading issues fall 1 to 3 points. Steel, which opened a little higher at 93, fell to a new low on the movement at 91⅝, and then climbed more than 3 points above that level. Chrysler's recovery was more striking, the market on the upper side proving to be about as thin as it had been on the lower. The stock rushed up 3 or 4 points without meeting much opposition.

For a while the sales volume increased on the recovery, which was regarded as a good sign, but the last hour tailed off into slack dealings, but finished with another burst of activity in contrast to the rush of the last quarter of an hour yesterday, when a large portion of the total day's trading was done and when most of the losses were suffered. It may have been mere coincidence, but the improvement in stocks began shortly after the news of the resignation of Justice Van Devanter from the Supreme Court, regarded as a conservative member. That was explained by Wall Street as reflecting a belief that the resignation might weaken the fight for packing the court, and later it was learned that the Senate Judiciary Committee voted unfavorably on the packing bill.

Early Decline.

During the first hour stocks reached the lowest ground since last July. At the close the gains in active issues were 1 to 4 points. Steels and rails led the rally. Youngstown was weaker than most of the steel list on strike prospects. It broke more than 3 points. Rails and motors closed 1 to 2 points higher. Auburn ran against the stream and dropped another 2 points.

Public utility stocks did not share much in the rally. A feature of the trading was the wide spread in bid and asked quotations in a number of preferred stocks. BQT preferred, on which dividends were suspended yesterday, opened 2 points lower and then lost 2 more. The common gave up 25 per cent of its market value. Certain-teed Products prferred, and Continental Baking preferred fell 6 to 8 points, respectively, on single sales. Homestake Mining jumped 20 points.

Banking Position.

Virtually all the important changes in the banking position in the week ended May 12 occurred in the New York Federal Reserve district. Demand deposits shrank $61,000,000, but increases of $1,000,000 were reported in Kansas City, $18,000,000 in San Francisco, $16,000,000 in Minneapolis and $13,000,000 in Chicago. Reporting banks disposed of only $11,000,000 of Government securities, and all the liquidation was for New York account. Other securities were down $30,000,000. The New York banks reported this item $33,000,000 lower. There was a $22,000,000 gain in "other loans," which will be broken down more usefully beginning in next week's report. New York banks contributed $19,000,000 of the total gain. Time deposits rose $46,000,000 and reserves increased $52,000,000, the bulk of the rise in both items occurring in this district.

Hot Money.

Foreign bank deposits in member banks of the Federal Reserve system climbed another $19,000,000 last week. They now stand $158,000,000 higher on the year at a total of $540,000,000. Of the year's rise, $130,000,000 has come since the first of January. That sum may be regarded as "hot money" inasmuch as it is subject to change of residence at any time. Much of it doubtless has come from liquidation of foreign securities in this market recently, but the situation in France is still such as to encourage the departure of funds, and undoubtedly Russia has been using part of its large gold sales as a means of building up dollar balances.

Paper Securities.

An excellent study of the paper industry has just been completed by Shields & Co. and the results printed in a neat folder. Analysis is made of the securities of 16 paper companies. The survey concludes that while profits for all will be sharply higher this year, the next two years will bring a "dog fight" for profits. The feature of the business is the development of newsprint and container board production in the South, which promises to bring on price cutting at northern mills.

Fog Over London.

This market must have been closer to a sympathetic collapse than most people realized, if press reports of the troubles in London now being received here are not exaggerated. The London Financial News of May 7 begins its account in humility and prayer, quoting from the Bible: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." It goes on to say: "The sixth of May, 1937, will certainly stand out in the memory of the House, especially for those with interests in and around the Kaffir market, as one of the most tense sessions in living memory. Nothing happened—but much took place. The sound of the hammer was not heard and for that there is reason to thank, not so much the lucky stars, as the amplitude of the communal provision made to tide over difficulties as they came to light." In plain English, a London banking pool saved a good many brokerage firms from bankruptcy.

Bank Essay Contest Won by Roland T. Carr

Kenneth Bergfeld Second and Robert A. Morgan Third.

Thomas J. Groom, acting president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, announces that Roland T. Carr, of the Riggs National Bank, has been adjudged the winner of the 1937 contest conducted by the American Institute of Banking and sponsored by the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Kenneth Birgfeld, of the American Security & Trust, won second place, and Robert A. Morgan, of the McLachlen Banking Corporation, captured third honors.

The essay this year was "How Can Employes Contribute to a Better Public Understanding of Banking."

This subject is regarded as being important in view of the polcy of the American Bankers Association to adopt a program of a better understanding of banking on the part of the public. This program is largely the result of the efforts of Robert V. Fleming, immediate past president of the association.

Under the rules of the contest the winners will have a trip to the forthcoming nineteenth annual convention of the association to be held at White Sulphur Springs. Mr. Carr, as the winner of the first place, will deliver his paper as one of the addresses at the convention. The other two papers appear in the printed proceedings of the conclave.

The judges of the contest were George O. Vass, vice president and cashier of the Riggs National Bank; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., and L. P. McLachlen, president of the McLachlen Banking Corporation.

Kennecott Copper Votes 25c Special

New York, May 18 (AP).—Directors of Kennecott Copper Corporation today ordered two cash distributions totaling 75 cents a share to stockholders. They were in the form of a 50-cent dividend and a 25-cent special cash distribution. Both are payable June 30 to holders of record June 4. Three months ago a dividend of 50 cents was ordered, while 85 cents was paid at the year end.

Calumet & Hecla Raise.

Directors of Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. today declared a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable June 16 to stockholders of record May 31. Previous payments were 25 cents quarterly. Company owns producing property in Michigan and has headquarters at Boston.

United Verde Votes $1.

United Verde Extension Mining Co. announced today a dividend of $1, payable June 30 to stock of record June 4. The previous dividend of 25 cents was paid on December 15, 1936. The company operates copper properties in Arizona.

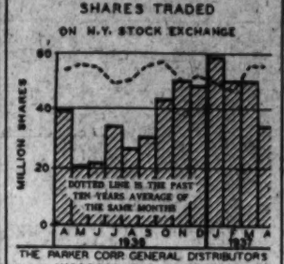
Kresge Sales Up 11.5 Per Cent

Sales of the S. S. Kresge Co. for April totaled $8,000,000, an increase of 11.5 per cent over the same month last year, it was announced today. Sales for the four months ended April 30 totaled $30,000,000, a gain of 10.5 per cent over the same period last year.

Stock Sales Decline 11.5 Per Cent in Year



Boston, Mass., May 18.—Stock sales on the New York Stock Exchange in April fell off sharply from March and even dropped below transactions in April a year ago. The smaller amount of trading occured in a falling market and such a condition indicates that the drop in stock prices was more of a correctional nature than forced selling. Total sales in the first four months of this year fell off 11½ per cent from the same 1936 months.

646 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, announced yesterday the completion of the liquidation of 18 receiverships during April. This makes a total of 646 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the banking holiday of March, 1933. Total disbursements, including offsets allowed to depositors and other creditors of these 646 receiverships, exclusive of the 42 restored to solvency, aggregated $217,399,942, or an average return of 79.41 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured creditors received dividends amounting to an average of 67.48 per cent of their claims.

Dividends distributed to creditors of all active receiverships during April amounted to $2,762,447. Total dividends paid and distributions to depositors of all receiverships from March 16, 1933, to April 30, 1937, amounted to $855,580,040.

Packard Shipments Set New Record

New York, May 18 (AP).—Packard Motor Car Co. today reported shipments of 15,164 cars in April, a new high record, compared with 14,550 in March and 7,826 in April, 1936.

Dealers' reports for the first ten days indicate May deliveries will run about twice the total for that month last year.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The French franc gave way to the dollar as trading in foreign currencies broadened yesterday after extended week-end holidays abroad. The franc fell .001 of a cent in New York to 4.47¾ cents. With it went the British pound for a drop of ⅛ of a cent to $4.94⅜. In contrast, funds continued to move toward the guilder, lifting the Dutch currency .03 of a cent to 54.98 cents. Elsewhere movements were restricted. Attracting attention in currency circles were reports of further substantial foreign trade gains from the Argentine, Canada, France and other nations. They were welcomed as aids to stabilization of exchange rates. In London the dollar closed at $4.94¾ to the pound, against a final sterling rate of $4.94⅛ in New York yesterday. The dollar closed in Paris at the equivalent of 4.477 cents to the franc.

Luxury Buying Continues Rise Over Last Year

Gains Are Running Ahead of Retail Trade as a Whole.

Minneapolis, May 18.—Mass buying of luxuries and semi-luxuries continues far out in front of last spring, in spite of a slackening in the gains shown by retail trade as a whole. Compared with an increase of 10.9 per cent for all retail trade, the public bought 32 per cent more furs, 23.5 per cent more luggage, 32.2 per cent more household furniture and 24 per cent more jewelry, in the first quarter of 1937, than in the corresponding period a year ago, at 236 department stores covered by the current survey of "prosperity goods" buying, made by Northern National Life Insurance Co.

A rapidly mounting proportion of this luxury and sime-luxury buying is being financed on installments; the ratio of time purchases has already far outstripped that of 1929. Time sales were 6.7 per cent of total department-store trade in 1929, hit a depression low of 5.95 per cent in 1932, rebounded to a new high record of 9.3 per cent in 1936, and are currently running close to 12 per cent of total department-store volume, the report states.

The increase in purchases of furniture and equipment for the home, a large proportion of which are customarily bought on time, is a material influence in the upward trend of installment sales, the survey points out. At the 236 department stores covered by the study, 12.7 per cent more pianos were sold than in the first quarter of 1936, and 14 per cent more electrical household appliances.

Terps Swamp Cadets' Nine By 24-1 Count

Assume 12-1 Lead in First Three Innings; V. M. I. Collects Six Hits.

Virginia Military Institute Cadets marched into College Park yesterday afternoon for a baseball engagement with the Maryland Terrapins, but the Old Liners did most of the marching for the day and paraded away with all the honors by winning the ball game if it could be called such—by a 24-to-1 count.

The Old Liners performed in out-of-step fashion most of the time, but it really didn't matter, as the Cadets were even more unmilitary. Maryland stole the Soldiers' thunder as ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF THREE-STORY BRICK DWELLING, 10 ROOMS, 2 BATHS, 1216 O STREET, NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6733, folio 217, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on TUESDAY, THE TWENTY-FIFTH DAY OF MAY, 1937, at 5 o'clock p. m., the following described property in the District of Columbia, to wit: The west 20 feet front by the full depth thereof of Original Lot 12 in Square 280.

TERMS OF SALE. Property will be sold subject to a prior deed of trust for about $4,500, at 6 per cent, held by Perpetual Building Association; balance cash. A deposit of $200 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within 25 days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after 5 days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

These properties are located in Maryland and adjoining counties and range from 10 acres to 5,000. Most of them are within 15 miles of Washington and on hard roads. See MASON HIRST, Annandale, Fairfax county, Va., at the end of Columbia pike. Phone Alexandria 869-J-1, Address Alexandria, Route 3. (Office closed Sundays.)

WE HAVE REFRAINED from making extraordinary statements about the beauty of Bannockburn Farm, which is being sold At Auction Thursday, May 20. Last Sunday an official of the Treasury Department castigated us for not advertising a true picture of the place. He said: "This place has more natural attractions than any I have seen within 25 miles of Washington." Looking in every direction, the charm is unsurpassed. It is situated within splendid commuting distance of Washington, in a delightful and exclusive estate environment, embodying ideal country-life conditions with exceptional accessibility and rural conveniences of living. You must see it to appreciate its lasting value. See Display Ad on the Financial Page of this paper or call N. C. Hines & Sons, Auctioneers. DIstrict 7740.

BROKERS ATTENTION
Please see Display advertisement on the financial page Bannockburn Farm, this paper. We agree to pay a commission of 2½% to the broker securing a purchaser for this estate at the auction sale. To be eligible for this commission the broker must notify us prior to the sale, in writing, of the name of the client he represents together with an acknowledgement on the client's part that the broker is his representative. We are always glad to protect brokers who comply with these conditions.
Brokers may also participate in commissions earned by us on contracts submitted by them, or from an auction which the broker assisted us in securing.

Negrin Cabinet Loses Support Of Anarchists

By the Associated Press.

Valencia, May 18.—Dr. Juan Negrin, premier of Spain's sixth civil war government, roused hostility of the Anarcho-Syndicalists today in the first 24 hours of his administration.

"The Negrin cabinet was formed without our participation and we will not collaborate with it,' 'they informed him.

Cabinet to Control Armies.

He disclosed a plan to abolish the superior war council and turned over direct command of the Spanish government armies to his cabinet. He announced his government would maintain "inflexible order" in the ranks.

It was evident the new premier anticipated trouble with the Anarcho-Syndicalists, who were not directly represented in the new cabinet.

After naming two Moderate Socialists, two Communists, three Left Republicans and one Basque Nationalist to the cabinet, the new government issued a statement "regretting" its inability to include the Anarcho-Syndicalists, but expressing confidence they would "rectify their attitude in the common interest."

Basque Refuge in England.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, May 18 (AP).—Officials of the semi-autonomous Basque Republic will be taken to refuge in England aboard a British destroyer if menaced Bilbao falls to the insurgents, Basque sources said tonight.

The threat to the refugee-jammed city was increased as an insurgent army pushed defenders from the flaming village of Amorebieta and pointed northwestward for the 9-mile stretch to Bilbao.

Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Basque official sources said, has notified Basque President Jose Antonio de Aguirre and his ministers he will shoot them when his troops enter the besieged city.

The British government has agreed, therefore, to give them the same refuge Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia received when Italians drove him from his kingdom, these informants declared.

Press Condemned By Lawmakers in Delaware Session

Dover, Del., May 18 (U.P.).—Delaware's Legislature, meeting in special session, today answered newspapers and magazines which criticized conduct of members during closing hours of the last regular session, in a sharply worded concurrent resolution.

Charging that "certain out-of-State newspapers and magazines have been publishing false and libelous reports concerning the conduct of members of this General Assembly," the resolution asserted that "scandal mongers" were responsible for the uncomplimentary articles.

"We strongly condemn Westbrook Pegler for his remarks in his syndicated column; the Philadelphia Record and Washington Star for their editorials; the Literary Digest and Time for their articles, and all other newspapers and magazines which published false and malicious reports without taking the trouble to determine the truth or falsity of such reports," the resolution said.

Criticism of the Legislature by the press followed its adjournment without re-enacting legislation relief funds for the State's needy.

Gen. Clem Buried In Arlington; Union Veterans at Rites

Maj. Gen. John L. Clem, "the drummer boy of Chickamauga," was laid to rest yesterday in Arlington Cemetery on a knoll overlooking the Capital of a Union he fought as a child to preserve.

Interment of the 85-year-old veteran who died last week in San Antonio, Tex., followed brief but impressive services in St. Matthew's Church. His escort of honor consisted of four Washington comrades who wore the blue: John M. Kline, commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R.; John T. Ryan, senior vice commander; William F. Dorsey, assistant adjutant, and Charles Fox, officer of the day.

Eighteen member of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, clad in their colorful uniforms, escorted the four G. A. R. veterans at the church rites. The procession up the aisle and to the hearse was led by Anna Hage McElroy, of the D. U. V., bearing a historic American flag.

German and Italian Bombers Shower Death Daily on 400,000 Huddled in Basque Capital which numbers all of two, and spot their targets for the day. Twenty loyalist planes could change all this. They are due, but they don't come. First there was the control commission which held them up when they stopped for gas at Toulouse. Now it is the delay due to installing supplementary gas tanks.

At the front the "Gudaris," as the Basques call their soldiers, stand up to diving, spitting planes with rifles. But in Bilbao, which is no stone and concrete Madrid, but a frail shell of wood, plaster and glass in a ring of hills, 400,000 people are helpless.

For five days I lived this nightmare. You lose all sense of time. They have been over 14 times today. Can it only be noon! Now the siren whines again, which means they are coming. Now it shrieks, three quick blasts. They are overhead.

What you do depends. You may catch the panic of the crowd and run to a "shelter," or just sit where you are and hope for the best.

A box of groceries just arrived by plane from Biarritz, which makes us realize we are only 25 minutes' flight from holiday-makers who came down for Pentecost and to whose pleasures the distant rumbling of war gives poignancy, they say.

Dangerous Flight.

It is on this fast little bimotor that we came in. Twice a day it makes one of the least popular runs in commercial aviation. Franco has said it will have an accident. And he has 115 planes to do his bidding. France's ambassador believes him, and warns foreign journalists that, French plane or no French plane, it will disappear one day. But we trust the pilot. Blond, curly haired, he sits up in his celluloid lookout in the nose, chews a cigar and keeps his eyes open.

"If I can see them it's all right. They can't catch me," he says unconcernedly.

That's why we waited that day at the toy airport at Biarritz for the ceiling to lift. Anyway, there's no timetable—no chance for the spies that swarm there to tip off the rebel pilot at Vitoria.

Here the coast curves into Bilbao Estuary, below the line of hills—first Mount Kata, then Sollube, and further inland Biscargui. Here are the national defenses of Bilbao. Below, on Koto, the pinewoods are burning, fired by rebel incendiary bombs. We see not a moving thing. But suddenly on the road near Baqueo, past Kaa, shrapnel bursts. So the rebels are trying to turn Cape Villano, whence they could the Basque flanks and push on to shell the harbor entrance.

On the left is Spain, purple mountains knee deep in the sea, San Sebastian. In the bullring the tourists love to see death contrived so intricately. The "wise monkeys" used to rake the yellow sand neatly over the stains, but now it is no longer intricate and nobody covers the stains.

Deva. Once years ago we watched the Basques do their sword dance, and the German tourists bought cider for everybody because it made them think of Heidelberg. German G. H. Q. here now.

Le Queiteo. In 1926 in the teashop under the plane trees the grim female and the sad boy. Long before Zita and Otto were demanding the throne of the Hapsburgs.

Bermeo, with its little painted houses and the brawny, cursing fisherwomen, who say they threw Italian soldiers out of the window into the sea one day last week, when, if the Basques had had planes, there would have been a second Guadalajara and a third Machichaco, where the retreating Basques, bombed out of Bermeo, rolled their coast guard cannons over the cliffs.

Bilbao. We turn inland and fly low. Villagers scatter in terror, but stop to wave when they see it's only us.

"Iron Ring" Too Close.

And the low hills with scratches on them, the "iron ring"—the last defenses of Bilbao. The men who built them deserted with their blueprints to the rebels. The trenches look very shallow and much too straight. Back there on Kata and Sollube is where Bilbao's defense should be, and would be if they had been given planes in time.

Two miles more and we circle and drop. There is an airfield after all. Sondica.

The ground crew is watching a conical hill about eight miles away. Mount Biscargui. "We" counter-attacked, it seems, and snatched the red and gold flag of the rebels from the little hermitage on the summit. Nobody can hold the summit. Geysers as black as gushers rise when the shells fall. The gun flashes are on this side. Which means that "they" have it now.

The pilot, still chewing his cigar, points. Three specks. Vitoria, where the rebels' chasers are, would be that way. He hurries his return passengers aboard, one of them Father Onaindia, dean of the Cathedral of Valladolid, who saw Guernica bombed, and takes off.

The customs men are very polite. I ask what about raids on this field? Nearly every day, they say. There was one this afternoon, in fact, but only one dead. So indeed blood is under my feet where I stand by the door of the first-aid station.

"But it is too late for them now," he said, looking at his wrist watch. Such is routine in wars. He was right. The three specks vanished.

He was pleased. So was I.

We drove hell-bent through villages where they also seemed sure it was too late. Up a hill and out above a narrow winding river lined with the foundry and filled with idle shipping. "The Carlists got this far in the siege of '73," said the chauffeur, "and they are only 12 miles away now."

"The siren will take care of that," and everybody laughed.

Local Youths Honored.

A Washington and an Arlington, Va., youth were among those elected to the student council, student governing body at Cornell University, according to word received here yesterday. They were Robert W. Pressing, 5717 Thirty-third street northwest, of the class of '40, and Austin H. Kiplinger, 2237 North Vermont street, Arlington, class of '39.

Spain's New Premier Will Defeat Rebels, Says Elliot Paul, Novelist Now in D. C.

Under Premier Juan Negrin, the Spanish government will succeed in extinguishing the rebel cause, provided Italy does not increase her aid to the anti-loyalists.

This was the prediction made here yesterday by Elliot Paul, American novelist and friend of Spain's new premier, who was marooned on a little island off the Iberian coast when the revolution broke last summer.

A resident of Washington since he returned to the United States in February, he is completing a book based on his experiences in strife-torn Spain during the latter half of 1936.

"Dr. Negrin is resourceful, dynamic, a quick thinker," said Paul. "Where his predecessor, Francisco Largo Caballero, was the sluggish, plodding type, though very sincere and conscientious, Negrin is a man of action and one who, I think, is much better fitted for the premiership.

"I believe Caballero gave up his post as a sacrifice because he wished to rid his cabinet of the anarchist membership. If he went, they had to go. So he resigned.

The author of "The Life and Death of a Spanish Town," which will be published next month, recalls Dr. Negrin as a jolly conversationalist, a prodigious eater and a friend of the intellectuals and workers alike. The new premier, Paul reminded, was dean of the University of Madrid medical school and is internationally known as a physician.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul, who had lived in Spain almost continuously since the birth of the republic in 1931, were on Ibiza Island, near Majorca, when it was seized by the Franco forces last July. At the mercy of the Fescist invaders, they were unharmed but were unable to leave until the following September, when a German mine layer took them aboard.
